Nationalists May Quit City Without A Fight CHAOS IN SHANGHAI

Shanghai, April 30.

Telephone reports today said all Nationalist defenders have been withdrawn into Hangchow from the outskirts and indications were that the big rail hub guarding Shanghai's back door will soon be abandoned to the Communists.

The editor of the "Hangchow South Eastern Daily" said Communist units have reached Pingyao, only 15 miles North West of Hangchow and one of the last defence points of the city's approaches.

There had been no real battles of any kind on the approaches to the resort city and the last Nationalist troops are now withdrawing into the city. More and more government troops are also withdrawing Southward across the Chientang River.

It was the impression in Hangchow that the defenders will leave the city completely within the next few days opening the way for the Communists to enter without battle as they did at Nanking.

Hangchow, a 1,500-year-old scenic city, nestled in hills and dotted with shrines and temples, remained calm and resigned as it waited for the Communists to take over. Business was slow with many shops closed but there was no sign of flight by the population.

pivot of the Nationalist line in Chekiang province. The city was said to have suspended business and civil organizations were in process of evacuating 100 miles East to Ningpo—the second envisaged Nationalist coastal bridgehead as the Communists move down from the Yangtze.

Another spearhead was reported to be threatening the central sector of the defence line and a third pushing down the having been assigned the task of impressing vehicles, it has been charged with their maintenance of fuel supply and other problems involved.

At the same time motor vehicle owners were informed that with the exception of those vehicles required for the dispersment of the public to outlying areas, none will be permitted to be removed from Shanghai.

Motor vehicles commandeered by the authorities are to be delivered within a stipulated time to the garrison headquarters and violators of this order may be subjected to corroboration and other punishment.

To ensure the security of the great metropolis tomorrow, the Garrison Command, General Chen Ta-ching, today urged local labour not to hold any gatherings in commemoration of May Day.

Under the wartime regulations promulgated last week, all forms of gatherings, demonstrations and parades have been banned. General Chen today reminded the public and private organizations of this order and threatened severe penalties to violators under martial law provisions.

WORKING CONTACTS WITH REDS

Washington, April 30. The U. S. State Department officials said on Friday that the United States expects to develop "working contacts" with Chinese Communist officials.

This does not mean recognition or approval of the Red regime. — Associated Press.

Kiukiang-Panchang railway in Kuangsi province. The civil evacuation of Nanchang is in progress.

But for the Shanghai Garrison Command, the main concern today was the deteriorating financial situation. The Garrison's political affairs commission in an emergency announcement told the city's 1,500,000 workers, employees, their fortnightly pay envelopes that there would be no cost of living index figure for the end of April.

The commission announced an interim payment of one silver dollar (intrinsically worth only 50 United States cents) but quoted by curb operators at $1.25 to each wage earner for the second half of April at the official pegged rate of four million gold yuan banknotes to a coin.

Had the index been issued, it would have been around 1,250 per cent higher than the figure for mid-April.

U.S. Dollars

As the U.S. dollar rate skyrocketed, the Central Bank of China announced that it would issue its own cashless order notes in 500,000 and 1,000,000 denominations—virtually accepting the collapse of the city's banknote system.

To meet the Nationalist army's urgent need for motor vehicles, the Garrison has appointed a special committee to handle the commandeering of public and private cars. In addition to

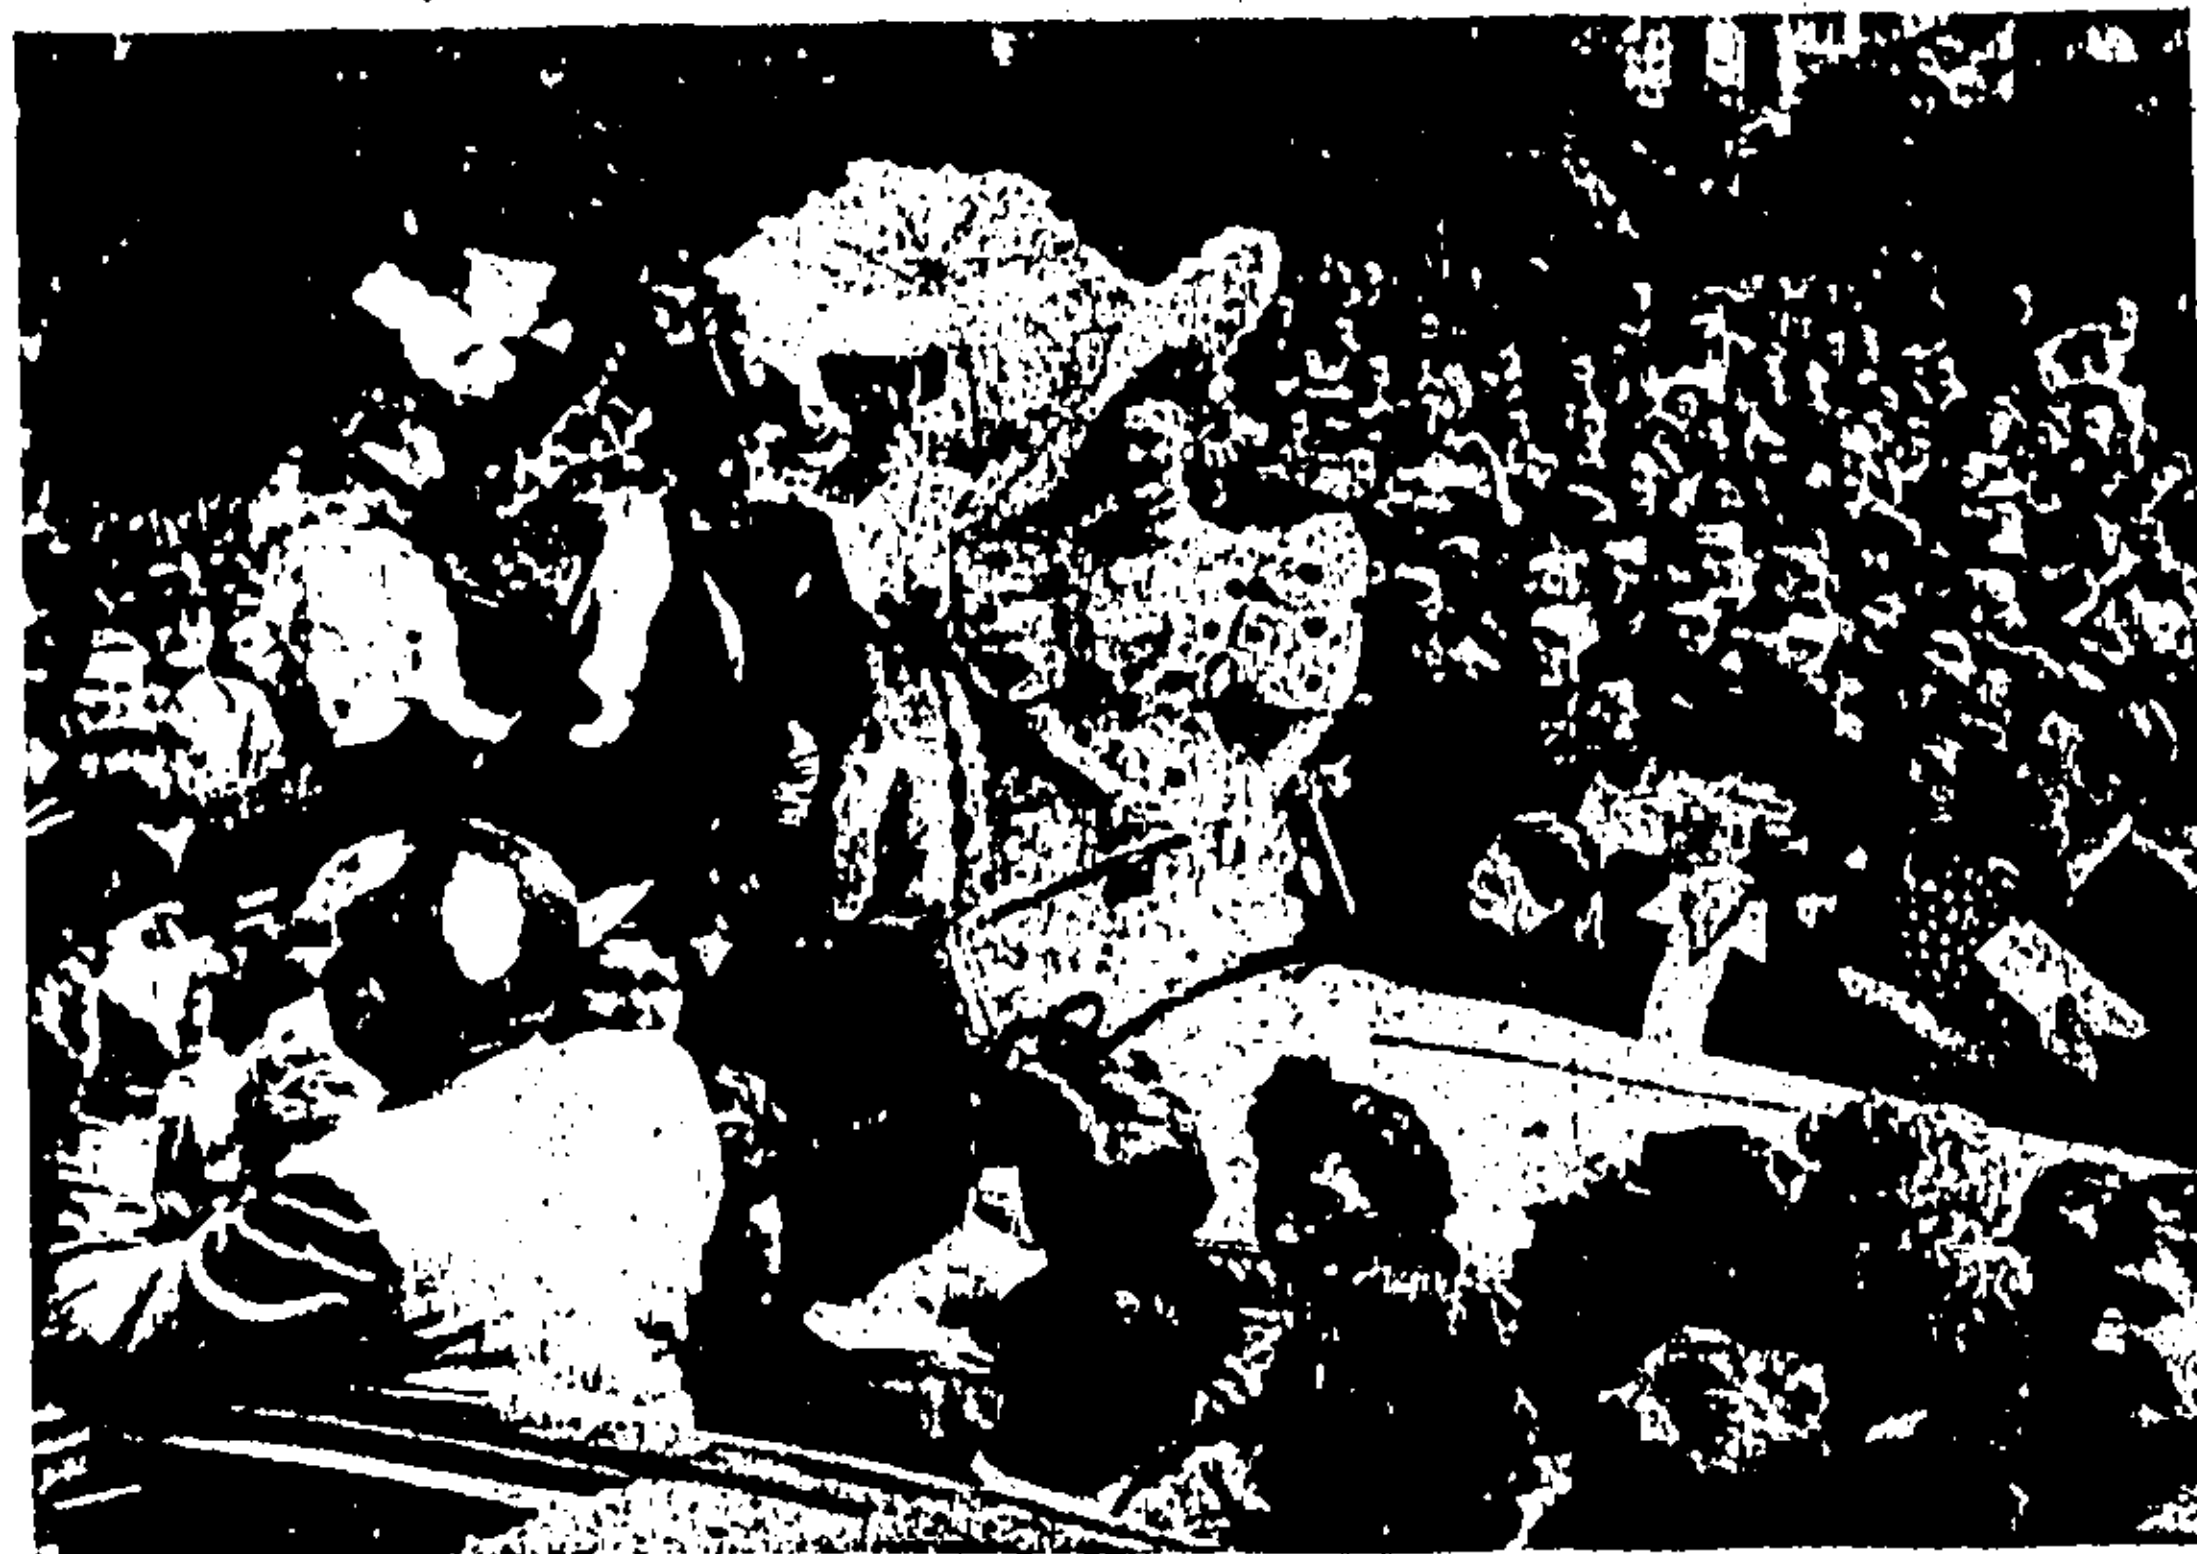

To Protect Industries

A joint committee for the maintenance and protection of Shanghai's business and industries was formed today by the Industrial Federation and the Chinese Chamber of Commerce.

The committee is to seek to pool the resources of the Shanghai guilds and other existing commercial organizations in an effort to preserve whatever happens. Shanghai's industries, which represent nearly 80 per cent of China's industrial productivity.

Most of the city's foreign population that intend leaving have gone. A last rush is expected when the Communists reach the city's outskirts, but most will be content to stay in their homes if there is to be a change-over period to protect their belongings and leave quietly a few weeks later under Communist evacuation arrangements.

For many Chinese Shanghai residents, however, the situation is different. Thousands clamoured outside the booking offices today of the China Merchants shipping company for passages on the last ships South. When they could not get through the steel grille doors that were slammed close, many Chinese climbed up high windows with their money and necessary certificates in one hand in an endeavour to attract the attention of attendant booking clerks. —United Press, Reuter and Associated Press.

Enough To Blow Up Cairo

Cairo, April 30. The police said enough explosives "to blow up all Cairo" were seized today during a search in the Egyptian capital.

Twelve young members of the outlawed Moslem Brotherhood have been arrested on charges of hiding explosives and other terrorist weapons.

The arrests and discovery of the cache were described as the most important police action to date in the campaign against those who assassinated Premier Mahmoud Fahmy Nekashy Pasha four months ago and committed sabotage throughout the city. —United Press.

DIPLOMATS SPECULATE ON SHANGHAI'S FATE

Shanghai, April 30. Western diplomats are divided in opinion as to whether the Reds should enter or by-pass Shanghai.

Their opinion, of course, means little to the Communists who seem at the moment to be more concerned with isolating than occupying this area.

Some diplomats argue, "The Reds should enter Shanghai at once and prevent disorders which seem certain to occur if the city is left on its own for any length of time."

Others say, "A Red entry will cut off an outside aid at Shanghai. Without such aid the city cannot exist."

Those of the first school hold that isolation of the city will aggravate the already severe financial situation here. The money situation is chaotic and not improving. Inflation has rendered the government's gold yuan almost worthless. Many shopkeepers are refusing the gold yuan in payment for such necessities as rice, pork and oil, and most wages are pegged on the gold yuan.

If this situation worsens, Shanghai may see food riots and looting.

Some diplomats think the Reds should enter the city at once to prevent such disorders and suffering. They hold that Shanghai is now a Communist responsibility.

Others, however, think Shanghai's 6,000,000 will be better off if foreign aid can be continued for some time. They think such help is more vital than a change-over to the Communist regime. If food imports are cut off abruptly they think Shanghai will crumble—and they feel sure such imports will cease when the Reds enter.

Communist military actions seem to indicate isolation rather than occupation. One long-time China resident expresses the opinion of many observers when he says he believes the Reds will throw a perimeter around Shanghai and attempt to more pressing matters elsewhere.

The latter could consist of eliminating the remaining Nationalist forces in this area and continuing Southward, leaving Shanghai sitting on the limb which the Reds could chop off at any time, but which they would not have to maintain. —Associated Press.

Anti-Cholera Campaign On

The Health Department has started its anti-cholera campaign and hopes to repeat last year's record when not a single case of cholera was recorded.

A special cinema van is now touring the New Territories to acquaint the people there of the disease, how it spreads, how it can be contracted, and what precautionary measures to take.

Plans are being made for talks on the subject to be broadcast over Rediffusion and Radio Hong Kong. Illustrated posters will also be posted at public places.

The worst cholera epidemic occurred in 1937 when more than 2,000 cases with a mortality rate of 50 per cent were recorded. There was also a small epidemic in 1940.

In both years, pious Chinese engaged Taoist and Buddhist priests to pray for the eradication of the disease. Goddesses were removed from temples and carried through the affected areas of the Mainland and at Shaokwan and Aberdeen.

In 1940 the Goddesses were paraded through affected areas in Kowloon City following the filling up of polluted wells there by the Health Department. As a result cholera cases declined. The pious Chinese, however, credited the decline to the mercy of the Goddesses.

In 1947 only six cases of cholera were registered here. They were imported cases and were not fatal. Quarantine authorities managed to get the infected persons treated in time.

Last year's clean record as far as cholera is concerned is credited to the comparative cleanliness of the Colony, the energetic Health Department and the Quarantine Service. With the co-operation of the public this year is expected to be similarly clean.

Water Safe
The "Sunday Herald" was told yesterday that water from the Government mains is safe for drinking. Only in one district—Shaokwan—should water from the mains be properly boiled before drinking.

The water mains in this district have been affected by the bombing during the war. The water there, however, is tested weekly by the Health Department.

Water from wells should always be boiled if used for drinking purposes. Food should be well protected from flies—which are one means of spreading cholera. Dustbins should be tightly covered to prevent the breeding of flies, latrines should be kept constantly clean and latrine windows made fly-proof.

Adults and children should avoid eating bruised fruit purchased from fruitstalls as the bruised parts may have been visited by disease-carrying flies.

The Health Department also warned against eating raw vegetable salads in view of the type of fertilizer used at the vegetable farms.

Fresh vegetables should be thoroughly washed or boiled. Residents should also avoid eating shell fish. Sale of mussels and oysters caught in local waters is prohibited. It is, however, is to be eaten, the shell fish should be thoroughly cooked. It was pointed out yesterday by the Health Department that cholera germs exist longer in salt water than in fresh water.

Care should also be taken to keep one's hands always clean.

Free inoculations against cholera are provided by the Health Department for members of the public at the Marine Department Building, the Central Fire Station, and at Fairview.

Mass anti-cholera inoculations for workers in factories, dockyards, workshops, and for employees in big business firms are also available on application to the Health Department.

KOREA WANTS DEFENCE PACT WITH U.S.A.

Seoul, April 30. Korea has asked the United States for a military agreement for mutual defence in accordance with President Truman's world policies, President Syngman Rhee disclosed today.

The Korean President declined to expand on his statement made in answer to a written question but sources close to him said discussions on such an agreement are being carried on in Washington and Seoul.

Korea also has asked the United States for a continuing supply of arms, ammunition, planes, patrol boats and military equipment sufficient to maintain South Korea's security.

Moscow Radio At It Again

London, April 30. The Moscow radio broadcast an accusation on Saturday—the day after the latest New York talks on the Berlin problem—that warmongers in the United States and Britain had "mad plans for world domination," but cannot succeed.

The broadcast quoted a May Day editorial in the Pravda, official organ of the Communist Party in Moscow, as saying:

"Terrified by an approaching crisis, threatening for an even greater increase in their fabulous profits monopolies, the uncrowned kings of Wall Street and the City of London, decided that following the victory over Germany and Japan the deck was clear for their mad plans for world domination."

"But the warmongers miscalculated. They have not succeeded and will not succeed in misleading the peoples. The movement for peace is acquiring ever greater scope. In various countries, peace conferences have been held."

The "Pravda" quoted Communist May Day slogans including "Friendship of the peoples of the Soviet Union, the USA, and Britain is the best guarantee of lasting peace."

A dispatch from Associated Press correspondent Eddy Gilmore in Moscow, received Friday night, said the possibility that the Berlin blockade may be lifted and the council of foreign ministers resumes meetings were viewed with extreme caution by the Russians. —Associated Press.

Naval Wounded Due Here Today

More than 70 wounded and one dead of the four British craft, which were fired upon by Red artillery in the Yangtze River recently, are due to arrive here today by the United States hospital ship, Repose.

These personnel of HMS London, Amethyst, Consort and Black Swan, were transferred from hospital to the American craft in Shanghai.

Three British Released

Berlin, April 30. Three British military police, held by the Soviet authorities after disappearing last night on the border of the British sector and the Russian zone, were being freed this afternoon.

The Soviet authorities informed the British that the men would be released at 3.00 p.m. —Reuter.

Trains Still Running

The Shanghai railway administration said trains were still running through Kiangsu, midway between the two cities despite reports yesterday that the city had fallen. The line, however, was reported threatened at two points, one on each side of Kiangsu. The railway administration also said trains were running to a point five miles East of Kunshan to the town of Lukiang, 30 miles East of Shanghai.

Government reports said the key town of Kunshan (Quinsan) is still in government hands despite earlier reports that it was captured. The Shanghai Garrison Headquarters admitted the Communists captured Chingli, eight miles West of Kunshan, and said they were massing men and artillery for a drive on Kunshan itself.

Communist reports said that the week's operations had trapped seven of the 18 Nationalist armies that held the Yangtze South bank but reliable reports in Shanghai said that at least two of these designated by the Communists were known to have escaped. Military observers in Shanghai are now awaiting further news of the military developments along the new 500-mile Nationalist line for indications whether Nationalist troops now intend to give battle to the advancing Communists or make another strategic withdrawal deeper into South China.

15 To 20 Miles From Hangchow

The main Communist spearhead was last reported driving within 15 to 20 miles of Hangchow.

THE WEATHER

At 5.00 GMT (3 p.m. HKST) the depression which developed yesterday over E. China is moving ENE across the Eastern Sea. A trough extends from it along the China coast to Hainan. The anticyclone is moving E across Japan and another row covers China. Pressure remains low over Manchuria and to the E of Hokkaido.

Today's Forecast—Moderate E. winds. Cloudy and cool, with bright intervals in afternoon.

Yesterday's Weather—Maximum: 79.5 deg. F. Min: 63.8 deg. F. Humidity: 83.8. Wind: 12.1. Rainfall: 0.2 mm. Total since 1-24: 1.2 mm. 10-14: 1.4 mm. as against an average of 38.4 mm. 11-30: 1.4 mm.

Be Careful When Crossing Roads

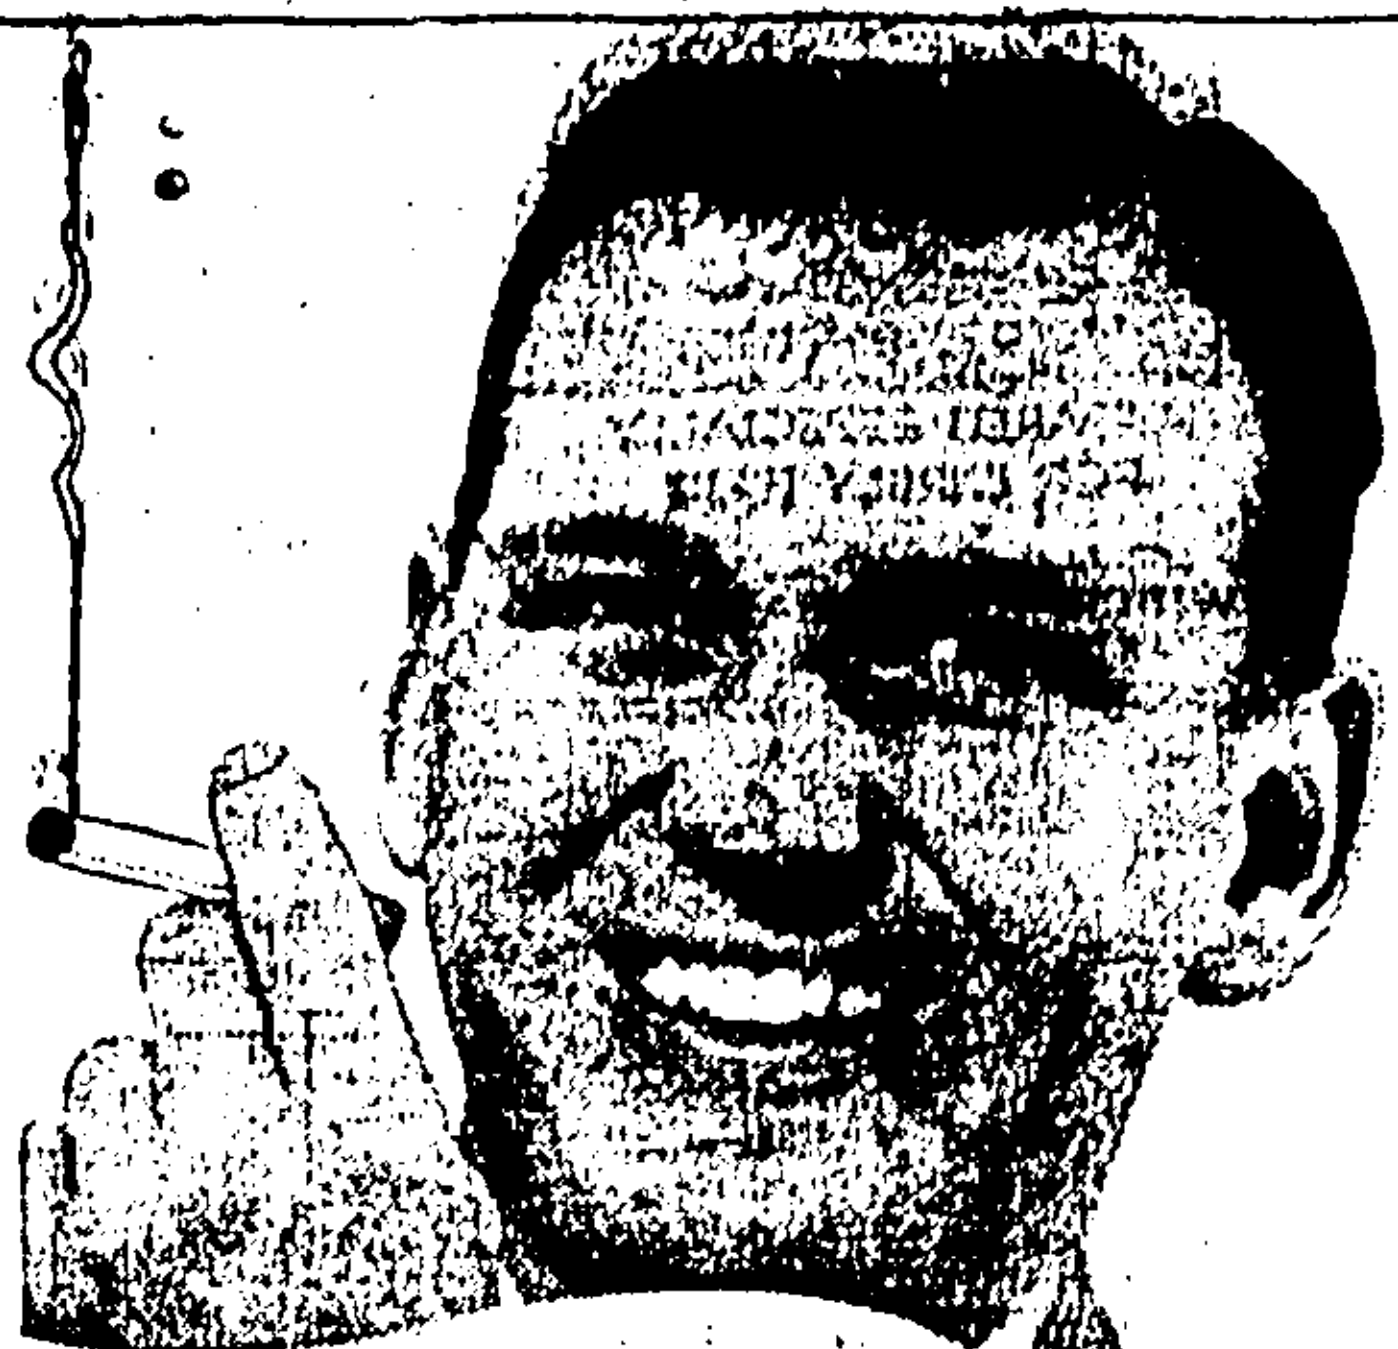

There are in Hong Kong today more than 15,000 raw learner-drivers of motor vehicles. So, keep to the pavements and exercise caution when crossing roads.

Official figures show that there is a total of 49,505 learner-drivers of whom about 34,000 have passed from learner to driver.

The Colony has in addition, 22,007 fully licensed motor-vehicle drivers. These include private car, taxi, public hire car, lorry, bus and motor-cycle drivers.

TO REGISTER CONCUBINES?

The Chinese Women's Club in Hong Kong is finding it difficult to carry out its proposal for a general registration of concubines.

Main object of the proposal is to protect the rights of the wife and her children in the event of her husband's death.

The Club will discuss the subject further at a meeting this week. It has been pointed out to them since the proposal was made that it is technically difficult to register concubines.

One difficulty is the fact that many husbands do not keep concubines but maintain "outside homes" (mistresses).

The original 12-point proposal by the Chinese Women's Club follows:

1. If no action is taken by a wife who, for six months has knowledge that her husband is keeping a mistress, it shall be deemed that the wife has no objection. Children of the mistresses, however, shall have no claim on any inheritance.

2. Officially registered concubines shall be entitled to 50 per cent of any inheritance of the husband.

3. Unregistered concubines shall be registered by the wives.

4. A married man without children shall not take a concubine without the consent of his wife who shall personally convey her consent to the Marriage Registrar.

5. Children of an unmarried couple shall be entitled to 50 per cent of inheritance or the death of their father. This applies only to children recognized by the father's family.

6. A concubine's children shall not enjoy the same privileges as the children of the wife as far as inheritance is concerned.

7. A husband's mistress, if admitted into the family, shall not hold the same rank as that held by other members of the family.

8. In the event the father dies before the children are grown up, the inheritance shall be handled by one member of the wife's family.

9. Bawdiness shall not be deemed an excuse for divorce, desertion, adultery, impotency, or insanity on the part of the husband shall qualify a wife to ask divorce.

10. Alimony shall be paid to a divorced wife.

11. A concubine taken by a husband without the consent of his wife shall be regarded as a mistress.

12. Husbands shall not be permitted to take concubines without the consent of their wives.

BROTHEL KEEPER SENTENCED

A brothel keeper was sentenced to three months' imprisonment by Mr. J. Wickes at Kowloon yesterday.

Mak Sze, aged 60, was also fined $250 or two months' imprisonment for living on prostitutes.

Mak was arrested when the police raided her premises at 27 Temple Street, first floor, yesterday morning.

Detective Sub-Inspector T. Dow said that defendant's premises had previously been raided in January this year.

Defendant admitted that she kept two girls in her premises and that they paid her 50 cents for every customer.

Shanghai Arrivals Hungry For News

People in Shanghai appear to be starving for news of developments in their own area.

A passenger who arrived here yesterday by a Pan American plane from the Northern city told the "Sunday Herald":

"The last thing they told me was 'send up some Hong Kong newspapers so we can find out what's happening'."

Under the martial law prevailing in Shanghai, only the official version of military operations in China can be printed.

The people wonder if they are being told the whole story.

Some of the passengers landing at Kai Tak in the past hectic week have reflected that attitude, as have members of crews.

"What's happening in Shanghai today?" is, ironically, a question which the evacuee is apt to ask even before the reporter.

In answer to that question yesterday, "Sunday Herald" drew much the same answers as on Thursday and Friday. The arrivals—Chinese, British and Americans mainly—said the city remained still quiet and orderly.

Guests as to the proximity of the Red armies to the city still diverged considerably yesterday.

"We just don't know," admitted one evacuee somewhat sadly.

Others said they were not sure, but that the evacuation was being handled well.

Few "Whangpoo" Or "CC" Men Here

While many political and economic figures in the Nationalist Government have been coming to the Colony from China, members of the "CC" and "Whangpoo" cliques seem to have chosen Taiwan as headquarters.

A survey conducted by the "Sunday Herald" yesterday showed that the number of persons belonging to these two groups in Hong Kong is conspicuously small. Almost all of them have followed their leaders, Chen Li-fu and Chen Kou-fu, to Taiwan.

Competent observers here believe that these Kuomintang members, considered to be President Chiang Kai-shek's most trusted men, are likely to make the island their last "pitch" in the fight against the Chinese Reds.

Travellers from the island also indicate that Taiwan will be the site of the Nationalist Government if Canton falls.

The only high ranking Chinese military official residing in the Colony is General Liang Yun, former Governor of Yunnan, who was deposed by President Chiang Kai-shek in 1945.

Standing at the top of the Chinese political refugee list is Dr. T. V. Soong, who took up residence here more than six months ago when he relinquished the post of Governor of Kwangtung. It has been persistently rumoured that he will shortly leave for London en route to Paris.

His right-hand man, American-educated Dr. P. H. Ho, former Director of the China National Reclamation and Reconstruction Administration and Governor of the Bank of China, is also residing in Hong Kong.

Tung Kwan-hsien, President of the Legislative Yuan, arrived here a few days ago with his family.

Dr. Wang Chung-hui, international well-known jurist and former President of the Judicial Yuan, has also made Hong Kong his temporary home.

Three Chinese diplomats, Dr. Wei Tao-ming, former Ambassador to the United States and Governor of Taiwan, Hsu Shih-yin, former Ambassador to Japan, and Dr. C. T. Wang, one-time Minister of Foreign Affairs, are now in the Colony.

Huang Shao-shuan, the only Government peace delegate returned to Nationalist China, reached Hong Kong a week ago.

Among the well-known Chinese bankers who have arrived in Hong Kong during the past week are: Chen Hsin-chih, President of the Bank of Communications, K. P. Chen, President of the Shanghai Commercial and Savings Bank and Chang Chia-ngau, former President of the Bank of China.

Dr. Y. C. Mei, President of the National Chin Hua University, who was summoned to Nanking by the Minister of Education just before the fall of Peiping, is now residing in Hong Kong with his daughters. He had been offered the post of Minister of Education in Dr. Sun Fo's Cabinet.

Well informed circles told the "Sunday Herald" that the families of other high ranking Kuomintang officials in Canton, including those of Dr. Sun Fo, General Chen Chi-tang, Governor of Hainan, General Wu Teh-chen and General Chang Kai-wen, are reported to be in Hong Kong.

Central Fund May Be Set Up

The organization of a Central Fund to aid relatives of those who lost their lives in the Yangtze incident will be discussed at a meeting in the board room of the Hong Kong and Shanghai Banking Corporation on Wednesday at 4 p.m.

The Committee of the proposed fund is composed of Commodore C. L. Robertson, Mr. A. Morris, and Mrs. A. G. G. Madden, wife of Vice-Admiral Madden.

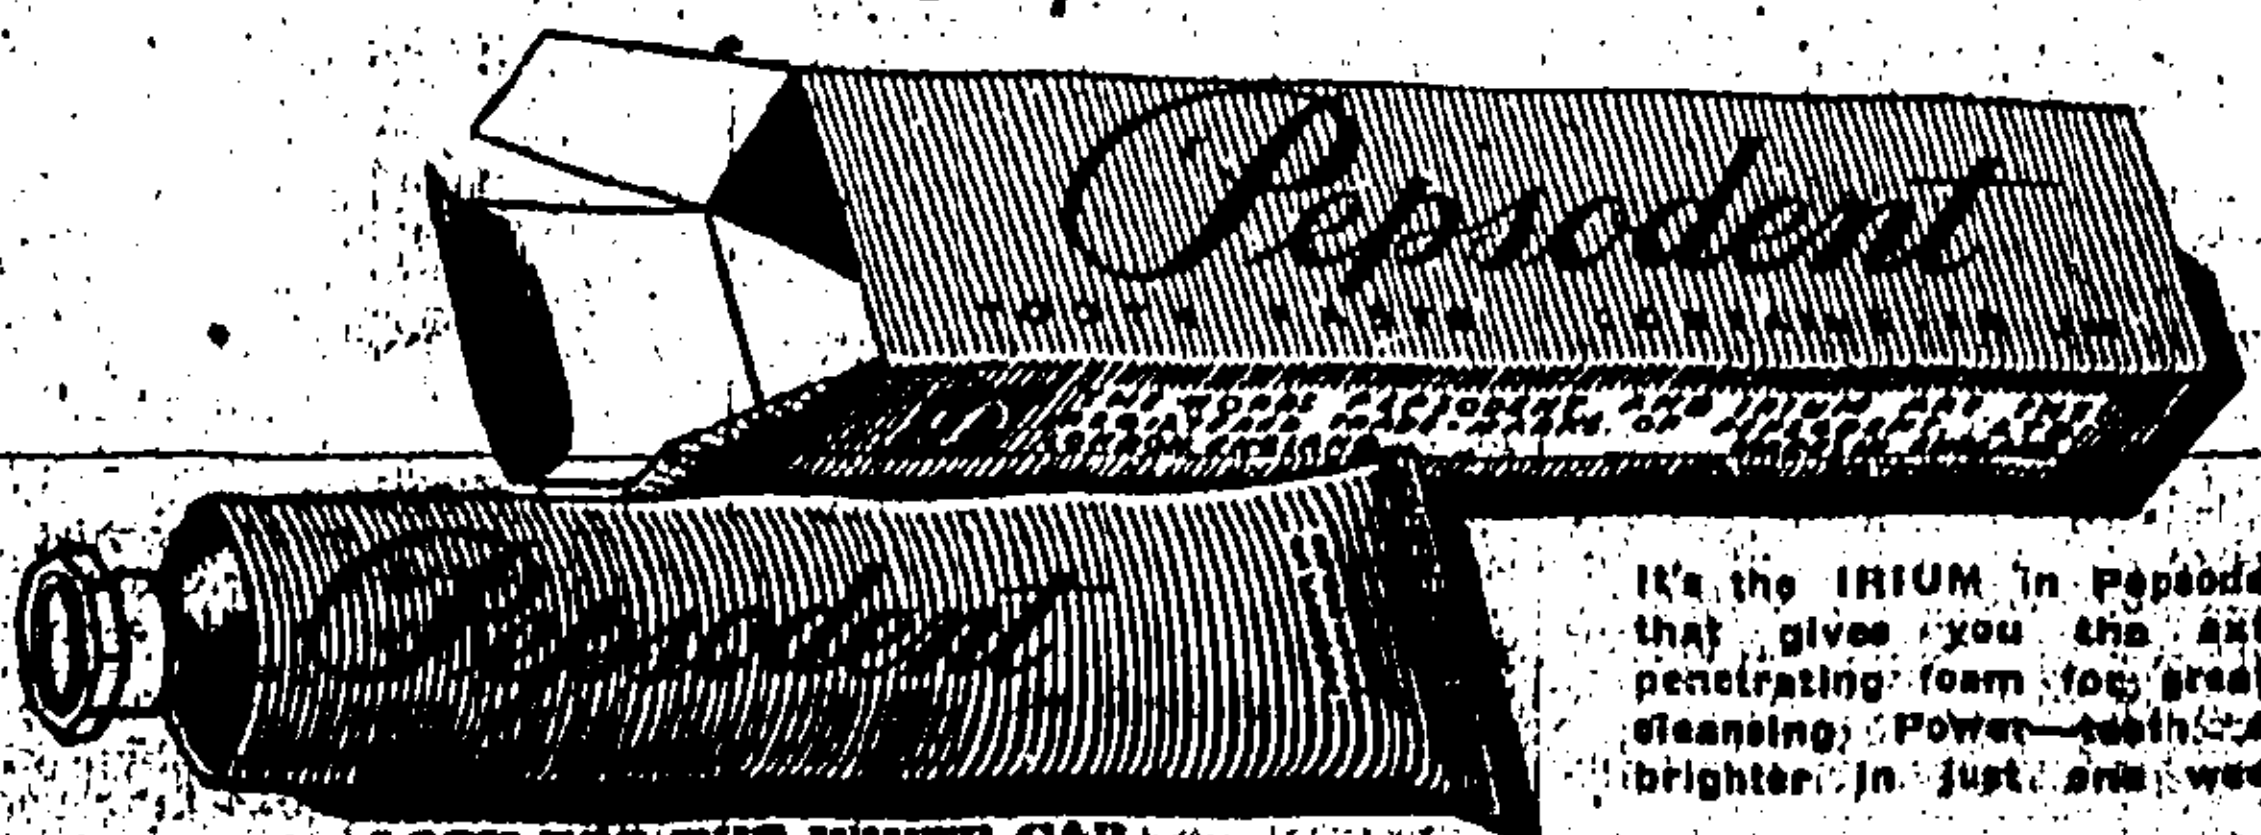

Those who wish to express their admiration, gratitude, and sympathy for the valiant men will be informed later how they may contribute to the fund.

Mr. Jack Bluns, photographer for "Life" Magazine, arrived here yesterday by a Pan American plane from Shanghai.

Four Reserves For Displaced Squatters

A scheme to settle displaced squatters from the city areas in four reserves, two on the island and two in Kowloon, was revealed to the "Sunday Herald" by Dr. J. H. Fehily, Chairman of the Urban Council, yesterday.

The largest of these reserved areas will accommodate more than 800 families, to be housed in huts which must be built to approved design to meet minimum requirements of the Health and Building Authorities.

The Health Department allocates sites, each measuring 20 feet to approved squatters who must build the huts themselves.

Dr. Fehily explained that Government could not possibly accommodate all displaced squatters, and no only deserving cases will be accepted.

The screening process is left to the Social Welfare Officer who checks up on the social and economic status of applicants for a minimum length of residence in the colony nature of employment, etc., are taken into account by him, and he decides which squatters are deserving of special consideration.

"The selected squatters," continued Dr. Fehily, "are allotted sites on which to erect huts. Here I must stress that we allot the sites only; we do not build the huts. The squatters have to arrange to build the huts themselves."

Council Condition

"The Urban Council, however, lays down one condition, and that is, the huts must be built in conformity with a simple plan which embodies the minimum requirements of the Health and Building Authorities."

"These settlements, when fully occupied, are to become communities of their own, and we cannot afford to have all sorts of structures put up with regard to some form of uniformity as well as health and fire safeguards. That is why we have drawn up a plan, a very simple plan for the purpose."

"Foremen of the Sanitary Department will reside in these special squatter areas and will be responsible for the maintenance of cleanliness and good order."

"Water supplies and latrines have been provided by Government, but as regards the various other works it is intended that they should be carried out by the squatters themselves, under the supervision of officers of the Sanitary Department."

Dr. Fehily explained that the huts would be built of wood, to be painted over with a fire resisting composition, adequately spaced to minimise the fire hazard. Each hut would have a brick kitchen which, incidentally, would serve as an anchor to the light structure in case of typhoon.

There would be a cement concrete flooring, and Government will provide the cement free for making the drains, but the squatters would have to put in the labour for the work.

"Many squatters have already been approved for the grant of sites, but so far, few have valued themselves of the opportunity of establishing themselves in these approved areas where there is reasonable security of tenure," said the informant.

Further Out

The reason for this reluctance to move in, he believed, was the fact that these areas were farther away from the city and from the places where they worked.

Others, he said, have complained of the lack of funds to erect the huts.

"To meet the last mentioned difficulty," said Dr. Fehily, "the Chung Shing Benevolent Society has most generously come forward with an offer to lend money to the squatters for building their huts, which they could pay back by instalment. These repayments would not be returned to the general funds of the Society but would be used for helping other squatters to build more huts."

The action of the Chung Shing Benevolent Society was highly commended by Dr. Fehily who said that employers whose staff wanted to live in these huts should do well to emulate the example set by the Society.

Government's sole charge is HK$12 a year rent for the site payable yearly, said Dr. Fehily. Clearing of the squatter colonies from the midst of the city and finding alternative accommodation for the more deserving among them, have been one of the knottiest problems of the Health Department since the end of the war.

Menace To Health

Growing menace to public health and spreading fire hazard. Clearing of the squatter colonies from the midst of the city and finding alternative accommodation for the more deserving among them, have been one of the knottiest problems of the Health Department since the end of the war.

Starting off with ample warnings to squatters to move out, these warnings had in most cases to be followed up with actual pulling down of the squatter huts by Health Department personnel.

Combined Concert

A combined concert will be given by the Sino-British Orchestra and the Hong Kong Singers next Friday, May 6 at 8.30 p.m. at St. Stephen's Girls' College. The programme will be repeated the following night, also at 8.30, at the European YMCA in Kowloon.

The orchestra will be under the direction of their regular conductor, Dr. S. M. Bard. Principal work to be performed will be Mozart's Concerto in A for Clarinet and Orchestra, with that fine clarinetist, Harold Woods, as soloist. The orchestra will also play Elgar's popular "Lullaby" Suite No. 1 and a march from Wagner's opera "Tannhauser."

A number of part-songs and sea shanties will be given by the Hong Kong Singers, with Donald Fraser, L.T.C.L., M.R.S.T., conducting. Among the songs will be "Bach's lovely chorale 'Jesus, Joy of Man's Desiring'."

Tickets may be obtained from S. Moutrie & Co., Charter Road, and at the European YMCA, Kowloon. Prices are $5, $3, $2 and $1.

CONCERT OF RECORDED MUSIC

A concert of recorded music will be presented at the Toldot House, (Too H), 50, Macdonnell Road, at 8.30 p.m. today.

The programme will include Overture "Prince Igor"—Borodin, Concerto in A minor for piano and orchestra—Grig, "Trojan March"—Hug, "Les Troyens"—Berlioz, "Invitation to the Waltz"—Weber and "Voices of Spring"—Strauss, sung by Miliza Korjus, and Symphony in C major, The "Opus"—Mozart.

To Build 50 Wooden Huts

Local contractors met at the Chung Shing Benevolent Society on April 29 and the lowest tender to build 50 wooden huts in Mount Davis, at $550 for a hut, was offered by the Kian Yuen Construction Company.

The acceptance of the tender is subject to the approval by the Urban Council.

All squatters are requested to apply to the Urban Council first. Qualified squatters will have to provide the sum of $100, and the Society will extend the balance of $500. Beneficiaries will have to repay the loan to the Society in 10 monthly instalments.

All the building materials were given back to the owners, but those attempting to rebuild were warned that the materials would be confiscated unless they moved out within 24 hours.

The constant vigil of squatter patrols has effectively countered large-scale attempts at re-building or prohibited areas. Dr. Fehily said the "Sunday Herald" that up to date the whole of the area from Eastern Street in the Western District, to the Eastern boundaries of Wanchai and Stubbs Road in the Eastern District, as well as the Peak District, have been cleared of squatters.

The policy of the Health Department is to push these squatters further and further away from the centre of the city, explained Dr. Fehily.

On the mainland, 12 areas have been gazetted for clearing, and large scale clearing operations will begin tomorrow, said Dr. Fehily.

The first phase of this campaign will cover the whole of the peninsula South of a line drawn from the North of Talkkai to the China Light and Power Plant at Tai Wan.

"It is realised that most squatters displaced from cleared areas will squat in non-gazetted areas, unless a really serious nuisance can be proved in isolated areas where it is practicable to proceed by complaint and agreement, it is not proposed to take direct action until such areas are gazetted for clearance," said Dr. Fehily.

Explaining Government's policy regarding further clearances, Dr. Fehily said squatters would be left undisturbed until any particular area was gazetted for systematic clearance. In due course all areas in the Urban District would be so gazetted.

In the meantime officers of the Sanitary Department keep an eye on conditions among squatter communities, endeavour to get the places kept as clean as possible, and in some of the larger communities, have built temporary latrines.

In addition, systematic inoculations and vaccinations are performed, and hut to hut searches for cases of infectious diseases are made from time to time, said Dr. Fehily.

CHARGED WITH ILLEGAL ENTRY

The case of the Russian woman, Mrs. Galina Ivanovna Kamachkina, aged 31, who is charged on three counts of illegal entry into the Colony came up before Mr. F. X. d'Almeida at Central yesterday.

Philip Gorman, aged 42, merchant was charged with aiding and abetting Mrs. Kamachkina.

Mr. M. A. da Silva pleaded not guilty on behalf of both defendants and May 19 and 20 was set aside for the case to be heard. First defendant is on bail of $2,000, and second defendant on bail of $1,000.

Former U.S. Admiral Arrives

ECA PERSONNEL HERE EN ROUTE TO CANTON

Personnel of the Economic Co-operation Administration, headed by Mr. Roger Lapham, China Director, arrived here from Shanghai yesterday by the US destroyer escort Alex Diachenko on route to Canton, where they will resume their China Aid programme.

The party left last night by the ss. Fatshan, for the Kwangtung city.

Meanwhile, the Regional Office, operated by 18 Americans and about 40 Chinese staff under Mr. George St. Louis, Regional Director, will carry on in Shanghai until the situation necessitates its evacuation.

The arrivals included 38 Americans (15 ladies) and 20 Chinese (six ladies). The deputy directors, Mr. R. A. Griffin and Mr. Norman Micklejohn, accompanied Mr. Lapham.

Office records and documents, together with personal effects, were also brought down from Shanghai.

Mr. Lapham, who returned to China recently from the United States, where he conferred with several statesmen, including the Secretary of State, Dean Acheson, and Mr. Paul Hoffman, ECA chief, said the ECA CHQ has been transferred to Canton because of the tense situation at Shanghai.

Asked whether any development in the ECA China policy resulted after his conferences, he stated the ECA would carry on as long as China is in Government hands.

Shipments of ECA "relief goods" will not be diverted. Shanghai will receive its share until the situation "prevents" the operation.

Mr. Lapham declared that there would be no concentration of ECA shipments at Hong Kong because of the evacuation of the GGH to Canton, under the present circumstances.

There will be many shipments of cotton to China, he said. Travelling with the ECA group is Mr. W. Bradley Connors, Director of the United States Information Service, China. The USIS is also transferring its GHQ Canton.

"The USIS regional offices are meanwhile carrying on in Red areas, and we are still maintaining communication by radio and mail," Mr. Connors said. "But we have no contact with Mukden," he added.

MORE REGISTER FOR HKDF

Total registrations for voluntary service in the Hong Kong Defence Force yesterday was 2,075, the "Sunday Herald" learned yesterday.

Latest figure of registrations for service in the Special Constabulary was not available.

At HKDF Headquarters yesterday it was disclosed that during the week there has been an exceptionally large number of applications for registration forms from employees in some of the bigger firms.

Drills are expected to start within two weeks. Recruits will either have to attend two drills a week of 45 minutes duration, or one drill a week of 90 minutes' duration.

Ex-U.S. Admiral Visiting Here

A former American Admiral, now turned business executive, has come to Hong Kong to survey local business conditions.

Admiral Giles C. Steadman, Vice President of the United States Lines Company, arrived here yesterday by a Philippine Airlines plane from Manila on a month-long visit to Hong Kong. He was met at Kai Tak by Mr. Harry Ayres, Manager of the Hong Kong office, and Mr. S. E. Walker, Far East General Manager.

The Admiral, who passed through the Colony in January this year, spent two months in the Philippines. He expects to visit Singapore, Tokyo and Shanghai later.

Shanghai, which is the last city on his list before he returns to the United States, may have changed hands by the time he arrives there.

Asked for his views on the present China situation, Admiral Steadman declined comment.

In reply to further questions, he said that he did not expect the United States would pull its forces out of either Japan or the Philippines in the near future.

Admiral Steadman served with the South Pacific Forces during the war. His operations took him to Singapore, Australia, Ceylon and Capetown.

JUNK MASTER CAUTIONED

Chan Yau-chuen, aged 27, master of junk numbered F417HA, was cautioned and discharged by Mr. J. Wicks at Kowloon yesterday for possessing two cannons, seven detonators and three pounds of gun powder.

The man was arrested on board his junk at Shaikwan harbour.

He told the court that he had kept the arms and dangerous goods on his junk to protect himself from pirates in Chinese waters.

Detective Sub-Inspector C. Aslew said that the cannons were of very old type and that they could render danger to their owners.

The arms and the dangerous goods were ordered to be confiscated.

TWO ACCIDENTS

In a tram accident near the Violet Peel Health Centre, Wanchai, shortly after 9 a.m. yesterday, an old woman was knocked down by the tram. She suffered injuries to her left eye and arm, and had to be detained in hospital.

A three-month old baby girl strapped to her back miraculously escaped injury.

Yip Yuk, a 24-year-old coolie, yesterday suffering from serious injuries after he was thrown off a lorry on which he was riding. The accident occurred near the Ritz Amusement Ground, along King's Road, about 1 p.m.

Seven members of the Economic Co-operation Administration's Shanghai office left Hong Kong yesterday by a Pan American plane for San Francisco.

The seven who passed through Hong Kong yesterday were: Mr. and Mrs. Richard Lieban, Miss Emma E. Klein, Mr. Virgil Van Street, Mr. and Mrs. James E. Coates and Miss Janet Stengel.

Mr. Paul V. McNutt, who was expected here from Manila yesterday with his wife and a party including Mr. and Mrs. C. V. Starr of Hong Kong, has postponed his arrival till next Tuesday.

Mr. McNutt, a former U.S. Commissioner of the Philippines, is now in private business.

Causeway Lament

Sir—I wish to ask our honourable Public Works Department when—if ever—it intends finishing the Causeway Road raising and reclamation project. Originally due to have been completed by Christmas, the project is only half done, and there is no sign that the P.W.D. intends finishing the other half. And now it is the end of April.

On Friday morning, a car slipped off the raised half of the street. Fortunately, no serious injuries were sustained by the occupants. The accident, however, just goes to show that half-way measures are dangerous.

With the rainy season approaching, car owners and passengers who live on Causeway Road will soon have to wade through a mire of mud to get to their homes, and the unruly part of the street is one mass of earth, stones and rubbish. If, for once, don't cherish the idea.

How about some action, P.W.D.?
CAUSEWAY-ITE.

Funeral Of Mrs. Sepher

The funeral of the late Mrs. Noor-de Sepher, who died in the morning at her residence in Johnston Road, took place at the Mohammedan Cemetery yesterday.

The service was conducted by Mulvi Cheung.

Mrs. Sepher is survived by her husband, Mr. S. A. M. Sepher, and three young daughters. Among a large gathering of relatives and friends at the cemetery were: Messrs. H. Abbas, Q. M. Omar, R. A. Bux, H. Baker, S. A. R. Bux, S. M. Rumi, S. A. M. Rumi, K. A. Rumi, S. A. M. Rumi, B. Sany, S. A. M. Rumi, M. Omar, M. I. Razack and M. A. Razack.

Floral tributes were sent by Sam Chik, Kai, Sam Lai-moy, Sam Chee-jung and many others.

Sentenced For False Report

"The police cannot be disturbed by people like you," remarked Mr. Thomas Tam at Central yesterday when he passed sentence of six months' imprisonment and expulsion to Cheung Shun alias, Cheung Kai-sing, accountant, of No. 255 Lockhart Road.

Defendant was charged with giving false information to Inspector Cockcroft at Aberdeen Police Station on April 27. The prosecution stated that on the night of April 27, defendant walked into the Station and reported that he together with a friend, were held up by two armed men at Queen's Road Central.

They were forced into a car and were taken to Aberdeen where they were tied up with a piece of rope. A sum of $30 was taken from defendant, and later he was thrown into the harbour. He did not know what had happened to the other man.

After the report, the police was sent out to look for the other man. After further inquiries, it was revealed that defendant himself engaged a taxi and went to Aberdeen for a sightseeing tour, and there, attempted to commit suicide.

Defendant pleaded for leniency, and said that his parents were killed by the Reds, and that he wanted to kill himself. Since his attempt of committing suicide was unsuccessful, he had to give an explanation to the Police.

Money Market

US dollars went up 10 points to HK$523 in yesterday's hectic half-day session.

A superfluity of Hong Kong dollars was given as the reason for the demand for US dollars.

TT yesterday topped the HK$6 mark.

Plastics were stationery at HK$10.55 a 100.

Ticals were again unchanged at HK$24.10 a 100.

NEI Guilders were slightly firmer at HK$32.00 a 100.

Sterling at HK$10.00 and Australian pounds at HK$13.20 were unchanged from the previous day.

JANUARY

(December 21-January 19)

Personal contacts count for more than hard work this week; don't hesitate to spend money on entertainment, pleasure. If prospects of a new link-up seem good. About Friday some important decision necessary either in a family matter or in some question of insurance.

FEBRUARY

(January 20-February 18)

Open your doors to the stranger this week and you won't regret it. Unexpected visitors pave the way to unexpected link-up and better understanding all around. Important days Monday and Friday.

MARCH

(February 19-March 20)

Much correspondence about a family matter and, later in week, about business conditions. Don't make changes in a hurry; wait for events to take their course end of week. Difficult interlude in personal affairs on Tuesday.

APRIL

(March 21-April 20)

Money problems are likely to be settled in collaboration with a relative and through the post. About Friday revival of a former association or lapsed friendship throws new light on current problems. A good week for anything relating to property.

MAY

(April 21-May 20)

However much you desire to break away, family claims and restrictions must be considered this week. Something happens that ties you closely to home affairs, but at the same time makes financial outlook easier. Much correspondence likely about money matters.

JUNE

(May 21-June 20)

You will probably feel restless and anxious to introduce changes, better wait a while. Prospect end of month more generally favourable than at the moment. A good week, though, for social life for short journeys and for personal affairs.

JULY

(June 21-July 20)

Don't alienate anyone who may be useful, eager to make enemies, than friends this week. Some important decision necessary about a long-standing commitment or old debt and circumstances may force you to make a move on Friday.

AUGUST

(July 21-August 21)

A crowded week and one that will probably bring unusual opportunities. Last two days probably the most eventful, though Tuesday should see surprising progress in a new scheme. A old problem likely to be cleared up on Friday.

SEPTEMBER

(August 22-September 22)

Don't worry if social and business schemes are temporarily held up. Marked progress likely on Saturday. Also, plans shaping for travel and for extension of interests overseas. An important week for correspondence and new contacts.

OCTOBER

(September 23-October 23)

It looks as though you will be busy sorting out a friend's problems as well as your own. A link-

WHAT THE STARS FORETELL

By R.H. Naylor

In this weekly series of articles, one of the world's foremost experts in predicting the future gives his opinions on what you personally can expect in the weeks and months to come.

Look for your birth period below and find the general indications for the week. Note that these observations are made according to the Zodiacal Signs and do not exactly coincide with the Calendar Month. For example, January covers December 21-January 19.

NOVEMBER

October 24-(November 22)

Interesting social contacts lead up to a business offer on Friday. Better remember that moves made just now are likely to be permanent. Think well before you make up your mind. If married, much to be with in-laws and partner's associates.

DECEMBER

(November 23-December 20)

Somewhat tense period in personal relationships but you reach a better understanding on Friday. An expensive week but prospects improve towards weekend. Much talk of travel later in the year.

SUNDAY, MAY 1

FOR MOST OF US: The day dreamer and idealist have the best of anything good today. Forget your material worries and find time for meditation and acts of kindness. FOR LUCK TODAY WEAR OR USE: Lavender 7 Opal.

BIRTHDAY FORECAST:

Although 1949-50 is a period that will certainly bring material gains, you would be wise to try to forget about them. The less you bother about worldly ambitions and about getting on in business or socially, the happier you will be this year.

Indeed, act of kindness and a sympathetic attitude toward those in trouble will avail you more in the end than strictly practical methods. However much money you may have, if you don't take a cynical view of life in 1949-50. Let your natural kindness have its way.

Although the outlook may seem somewhat complicated, you should have few actual troubles in the coming 12 months. Whether or not you worry about money, income will keep up a satisfactory level and you should have few cash difficulties. There will, however, be a certain amount of bother over family affairs or family correspondence.

If you get a chance to travel, take it. Experiences while on a journey will do much to inspire you, if a creative worker or artistically gifted, or to bring peace of mind and happiness if more prosaically minded. Probably the best months in which to go travelling would be June or October.

Whether married or single, our life this year will be marked by happy and romantic experiences. But, if unmarried, the marriage ceremony doesn't seem to be indicated this year and you will be wise not to rush into it. Possibly more emotional satisfaction will be gained through idealistic link-ups with people of similar interests to your own.

MONDAY, MAY 2

FOR MOST OF US: Morning hours may bring disturbing experiences; after that, settle down to hard work. A chance this afternoon of making arrangements that should bring satisfaction for some time to come. FOR LUCK TODAY WEAR OR USE: Red-brown, 8, Dark sapphire.

BIRTHDAY FORECAST:

The first few weeks of your birthday year are likely to be irritating and difficult. Until about the end of June you will probably feel that circumstances are against you and that you will not get far this year. Fortunately events due about the end of June will cause you to change your mind.

About that time you can expect surprises and some unsought but desirable changes. These should clear the way to a most successful interlude that you will probably start upon in September. But between your birthday and early September life may well prove a series of disconnected incidents and upsets.

Think of the future and plan well ahead. You will probably get a chance to do this in late September or early October. Don't hesitate to clinch arrangements that may tie you down for a period of years but will go far towards bringing future comfort and security.

Older people will play an important part in your affairs and so do friends with whom you may have lost touch recently. Unexpected reappearance of a former friend or associate does much to clear both the business and personal outlook between July and the end of September.

TUESDAY, MAY 3

FOR MOST OF US: Propitious for quick deals and for money making. Not suitable for any complicated or out-of-the-way venture. Gambler's luck for many early and late in day. FOR LUCK TODAY WEAR OR USE: Pastel shades, 6, Turquoise.

BIRTHDAY FORECAST:

During much of 1949-50 you will experience "luck" such as you have not had for some time past. Circumstances play into your hands very pleasantly both in the near future and again early in 1950. It will be your own fault if you do not achieve some real success and make your existence more agreeable than formerly.

Income should appreciate early in the year and changes due about August should reinforce this good fortune. Don't attempt to "stay put" during the coming 12 months. You will only achieve prosperity if you can carry through necessary reshuffles and face up to emergencies.

Any trouble that materialises in 1949-50 will come either through unreliable associates who let you down in money matters or through mischief-makers. Don't let yourself be victimised by unscrupulous or hard-up friends and don't take rumours seriously if you want to keep your peace of mind and your prestige.

Although you will probably move house or change business premises during the next 12 months, it would not be wise to travel. In particular, journeys overseas are likely to bring complications and disagreeable adventures.

It is an excellent year for getting engaged or married, though jealous friends will probably do their best to ruin your romance. If already married, keep relatives out of your affairs as much as possible and concentrate on making life more agreeable and on improving house and garden.

WEDNESDAY, MAY 4

FOR MOST OF US: If engaged in financial transactions, important buying, be careful. Easy to overspend, enter into unfortunate commitments today. Better prospects for routine workers. FOR LUCK TODAY WEAR OR USE: Sea green, 2, Moonstone.

BIRTHDAY FORECAST:

Although this new year of life may open with stormy episodes, yet as the months go by you will feel more confident and optimistic about your own affairs. Provided you do not attempt important reshuffles this year, you are likely to flourish and to find happiness.

Business competition is likely to be keen in the next few months and you may be the focus of some scandalous gossip among friends and relatives. But, if you can face up to the disagreeable attacks, you will have reason to congratulate yourself with the next six months. Such attacks could be diverted so that they became good publicity for you and yours.

It is a good year for travel, for minor reshuffles both in your family and in your business, but not propitious for important changes. You will probably get an offer to make radical alterations in your affairs about August, but it would not be wise to accept it. Better wait until after your 1950 birthday.

Take care of health, particularly during August and in the early months of 1950. Also, don't be in a hurry to move house this year; both your health and affairs will do better in your present environment during the 12 months to come.

If young and heart-whole there are some amusing adventures ahead of you during the next few months but it is unlikely that any of them would pave the way to marriage. If already settled, beware controversies, both in your own circle of relatives and among in-laws. Better settle any opportunity to get away from family bickering and immerse yourself in some new group or society.

FRIDAY, MAY 6: Don't count upon any scheme that involves women or their interest going through easily. Better prospects for ordinary deals; anything that relates to property. FOR LUCK TODAY WEAR OR USE: Black White Check, 4, Diamond.

It is useless hoping to make money through speculation or without serious effort this year. You should prosper in 1949-50 but it will be as the result of hard work and past experience. There is no easy road to good fortune this year.

You should, however, begin to profit from ventures that had their beginnings about seven or eight years ago. Also, specialised knowledge could be advantageously used in the next few months. Good work done in the past will bring its reward in 1949-50.

You can hardly go wrong in anything that involves property or land. Also, schemes in which older relatives take a part are likely to prosper. If you have expectations of a legacy, it may materialise either in September or January.

Let the social side of life lapse for a while; schemes that entail taking the lead socially are likely to fall through. In any case you will probably be in a serious mood and find the company of thoughtful people more congenial than that of gossips. The revival of an old friendship is likely to bring a good deal of happiness in 1949-50. Family ties, too, will be strengthened this year. But both within and outside the family, women are likely to be a problem and may, during the early months of the year, involve you in a loss of money.

SATURDAY, MAY 7: FOR MOST OF US: Sports enthusiasts will find plenty of interest in today's developments, but travellers are under somewhat difficult stars. A good day for anything that needs courage and initiative. FOR LUCK TODAY WEAR OR USE: Vermillion, 9, Bloodstone.

Now begins a turbulent year but one in which you will have many opportunities of making a name for yourself. It would be foolish to sidestep trouble; better face up to difficulties bravely and fight the battles to the end.

Both in business and personal affairs there will be a good deal of opposition and criticism to encounter. But the stars fight on your side; if you take a bold line you should overcome your opponents early in the year. September and November are likely to be especially important months.

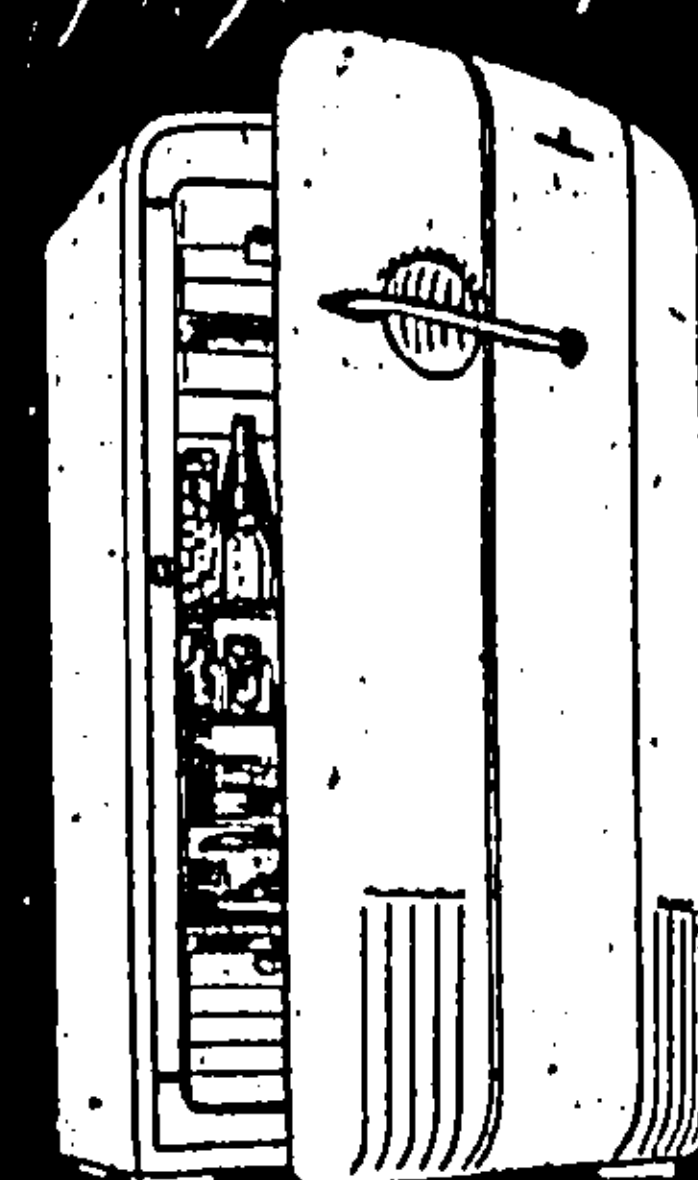

If an employer, staff trouble will intensify after June. If employed, it will be difficult to settle down with new arrivals among your fellow workers and you may be dragged into quarrels that don't concern you. But a firm attitude will pay in either event; if involved in argument, don't compromise.

It is a propitious year for anyone who has sporting interests and there is some prospect of gains through speculation. But money worries will be the least of your problems in 1949-50. You should find that income keeps up a satisfactory level without much attention on your part.

Relationships with relatives of your own generation are likely to be troubled. Also, youngsters in the family will be unruly and disagreeable. But new friendships will compensate for any home worries, and if now unmarried, may speed up engagements and marriage.

ARTISTS' COLD WAR
AT ROYAL ACADEMYDefinition
Of Eurasian

Kuala Lumpur, April 30.—The Eurasian Union conference has finally agreed on a definition of a Eurasian. "A person of mixed European and Asian descent whose father or any of whose progenitors on the male side is of European descent." (A Eurasian is the all-inclusive name given members of the white race).

The definition was needed to ensure uniformity in admitting members to the Eurasian Association.—Associated Press.

ORDER ON CARTELS
EVADED

Washington, April 30.—An official investigation committee yesterday accused the American occupation authorities of evading Presidential orders to break up German cartels and monopolies.

The group was sent to Germany last year by the then Secretary of the Army, Kenneth Royall. It said in its report that the failure of the occupation authorities has resulted in a threat of the same international trade conditions that helped to produce the second World War, rising again.

Mr. Royall created the committee to investigate the progress of the decartelisation programme first ordered by President Roosevelt and then reaffirmed by President Truman.

The report asserts that the break-up of cartels is not being implemented because certain high officials abroad do not believe in it.—Associated Press.

London, April 29.—A cold war raged today at the summer exhibition of the Royal Academy of Arts in London's Piccadilly.

On the surface, everything appeared friendly. Every one who is somebody in either the social whirl or the art world was there because it is a private review.

Five thousand people were engaged in animated conversation. Vivid passions rivalled the colourful selection of paintings, but the house was divided into two camps — the supporters of Sir Alfred Munnings, aged 60, retiring President of the Academy, and Modernists.

Explosive Sir Alfred was repeating all the expletives that millions of radio listeners heard him use in his attack against the Modernists during last night's Academy banquet.

The Modernists were still smarting from the phrases Sir Alfred applied to their work — "aesthetic juggling," "rubbish," "nonsense." They stood expectantly near their paintings or sculpture as if ready to protect them against physical attack.

Through the galleries went Sir Alfred, wearing a black coat and a polka dot bow tie. Following him came his chief champion — Lady Munnings.

"Chamber Of Horrors"

Old ladies and conservative artists patted him on the back, congratulated him on his "forthrightness." London's youthful artists and bearded intellectuals glared at Sir Alfred as he passed. Vivid remarks, which Sir Alfred could not help hearing, were hurled at his departing back.

Outside the Sculpture Gallery Sir Alfred drew a halt. "I just won't go into that chamber of horrors," he said, pointing to a pair—a male and female nude in terra-cotta. "Did you ever see anything like that? Yet they let the fellow responsible in as a Member the other day."

Sir William Dick, sculptor of the late President Franklin D. Roosevelt's statue in Grosvenor Square, Sir Gerald Kelly, the Irish painter, Henry Rushbury, the new Keeper of the Academy, Arnold Mason, the bearded portrait painter, Stephen Bone, the artist son of Sir Mulholland Bone, the artist, and Vincent Harris, the architect of the new Whitehall Government buildings, all remained silent on the controversy.

"We're gossiping like the devil among ourselves but we prefer not to be quoted," Sir Gerald said.

Churchill's Idea

The triumphant Sir Alfred said that Mr. Winston Churchill, who has five pictures on view, had been the instigator of his attack on Mallase and Henry Moore, the British sculptor.

"Mr. Churchill told me to go ahead with the banquet and we can have a good row," Sir Alfred has six pictures in

Hospital
Terrorised
By Lunatics

Paris, April 29.—Police used tear gas bombs to capture two lunatics who spread terror in a hospital at Vesoul, Eastern France. After freeing themselves from their strait-jackets, the madmen smashed all the medical equipment and crockery, while nursing attendants barbed themselves.

The police used tear gas bombs after being driven back by a rain of missiles.—Reuter.

BORDER
HALTED

Bavaria, April 29.—Between 600 and 700 Sudeten Germans are camped on the Austrian side of the German frontier near here, after border authorities had halted them in a rush to cross through Bavaria to the French Zone of Germany.

The Sudetens, who were expelled from Czechoslovakia, begged an official welcome awaited them in the French Zone. They had been living in refugee camps in Austria.

German frontier police at Bad Reichenhals said the Sudetens had apparently misinterpreted press reports that the French Military Government is ready to receive 120,000 refugees as settlers in its zone. They were evidently unaware that the French offer applies only to refugees already in the Anglo-American Zone of Germany.

This led them to try to stream through Bavaria, which is in the United States Zone. After being halted at the border, the Sudetens camped on the spot with all their worldly possessions.

The problem of their future has been referred to the American Military Government officials in Berlin.—Reuter.

GLUBB-PASHA
IN LONDON

London, April 29.—Major-General John Glubb Pasha, Commander of the Transjordan Arab Legion, is now in London on what is believed to be a private visit. A Foreign Office spokesman said today.

He was commenting on a report that General Glubb has come to discuss a further increase in the British subsidies to Transjordan. General Glubb has not, so far, called at the Foreign Office, the spokesman added.—Reuter.

Bao Dai's Return Can Mean Indo-China Peace

Saigon, April 30. The abdicated Emperor of Annam, Bao Dai, has finally returned to tortured Indo-China, but the big question remains: Is there any hope that his return can bring peace to this embattled land?

There was a quick answer from the Guerilla forces of Communist-Nationalist Ho Chi Minh, president of the Democratic Republic of Viet-Nam, which has been engaged in bitter conflict with French soldiers for a year and a half.

Ho Chi Minh's radio termed Bao Dai a traitor and a war criminal and threatened destruction of the French-sponsored Provisional Central Government of Viet-Nam, which Bao Dai will head. Yet the French have persuaded Bao Dai to return to Indo-China. Why?

To most competent foreign observers here, the answer is simply: they have no other hope. Indochina, hard-headedness and what many consider plain colonial bumbling from the state left the French in a predicament that is something like this: Ho Chi Minh's armies control most of the coastal strip known as Viet Nam (Tonkin in the North, Annam in the centre, and Cochinchina in the South). French forces hold the big cities of Saigon, Hanoi, Haiphong, and Hue. But the French themselves say very clearly that the French hold the cities in the daylight hours; Ho Chi Minh holds them at night.

Three Choices

The French, thus, have three choices. 1. They could launch an all-out military offensive and destroy the Vietnamese guerilla armies. Frankly the French don't have the forces to do so, and even then it's doubtful if they could succeed. 2. The French could get out of Indo-China and give the lush lands to Ho Chi Minh. This suggestion has never been considered. Anyway, the Western democracies would not permit a government that they think may prove too friendly to Moscow. 3. With Bao Dai back, under terms perhaps better than Ho Chi Minh could gain, they can hope that the former Emperor will succeed in winning the support of enough of the nationalist Vietnamese peoples to neutralise the power of the Ho Chi Minh government.

A bit more practical now than in the one year of indecision since the June, 1948, agreement with Bao Dai at Sale d'Alang in Northern Indo-

China, the French think they have some hope of bringing order out of chaos.

Up until now the "Provisional Central Government of Viet-Nam," which was supposed to be the framework of the new Bao Dai administration, has been purely paper. It has no authority and must rely on the French for funds and armed protection.

Foreign onlookers on the tragedy of this attractive land are openly pessimistic for the future. But they concede that the only apparent French hope is Bao Dai. They feel that, at best, it will be a long pull—providing the Bao Dai gesture has not been made too late.

There are Frenchmen here who have always felt it made little difference whether Bao Dai or Ho Chi Minh takes over. They look upon both as anti-French. Many seem to feel there may even be an agreement between the two Vietnamese leaders.

Statements by Ho Chi Minh's forces give little to indicate there is an understanding between the two men. On the

Ceylon Is Quite Happy

Dublin, April 29. Mr. Don Stephen Senanayake, Prime Minister of Ceylon, replied: "I think we are quite happy as we are," when reporters here asked him today if Ceylon is likely to follow India's example.

He said that he is very glad that a way is being found to produce India's adherence to the Commonwealth.

Mr. Senanayake arrived at Dublin Airport today on a visit to the Eire Prime Minister, Mr. John Costello, who welcomed him with the Acting Minister for External Affairs, Dr. Noel Brown. —Reuter.

other hand, Bao Dai's representatives have talked in Paris of possible conferences with Ho. Both leaders want Indo-Chinese independence for Viet-Nam. Bao Dai is willing to accept it within the framework of the French Union. The Chinese Communists on their way South, Ho Chi Minh's rebel government has become more adamant in demanding complete independence for his peoples.

A hint of tomorrow, with all its portents for the future of the Western powers in South East Asia, may be gleaned from the coming events in Indo-China. —Associated Press.

Brighter Picture In Indonesia

Batavia, April 29.

Dutch and Indonesian authoritative sources agreed today that the five-day visit here of Dr. Mohammed Hatta, Republican Prime Minister, has contributed to improving the outlook for an agreement on points at present dividing the parties.

Dr. Hatta returned today to his place of internment on Banka Island after talks with the chief Dutch negotiator, Dr. J. Van Royen. As he left, Batavia's streets were beflagged in honour of the birthday of Queen Juliana who will be 40 tomorrow. With the Republican Prime Minister was the Sultan of Jogjakarta.

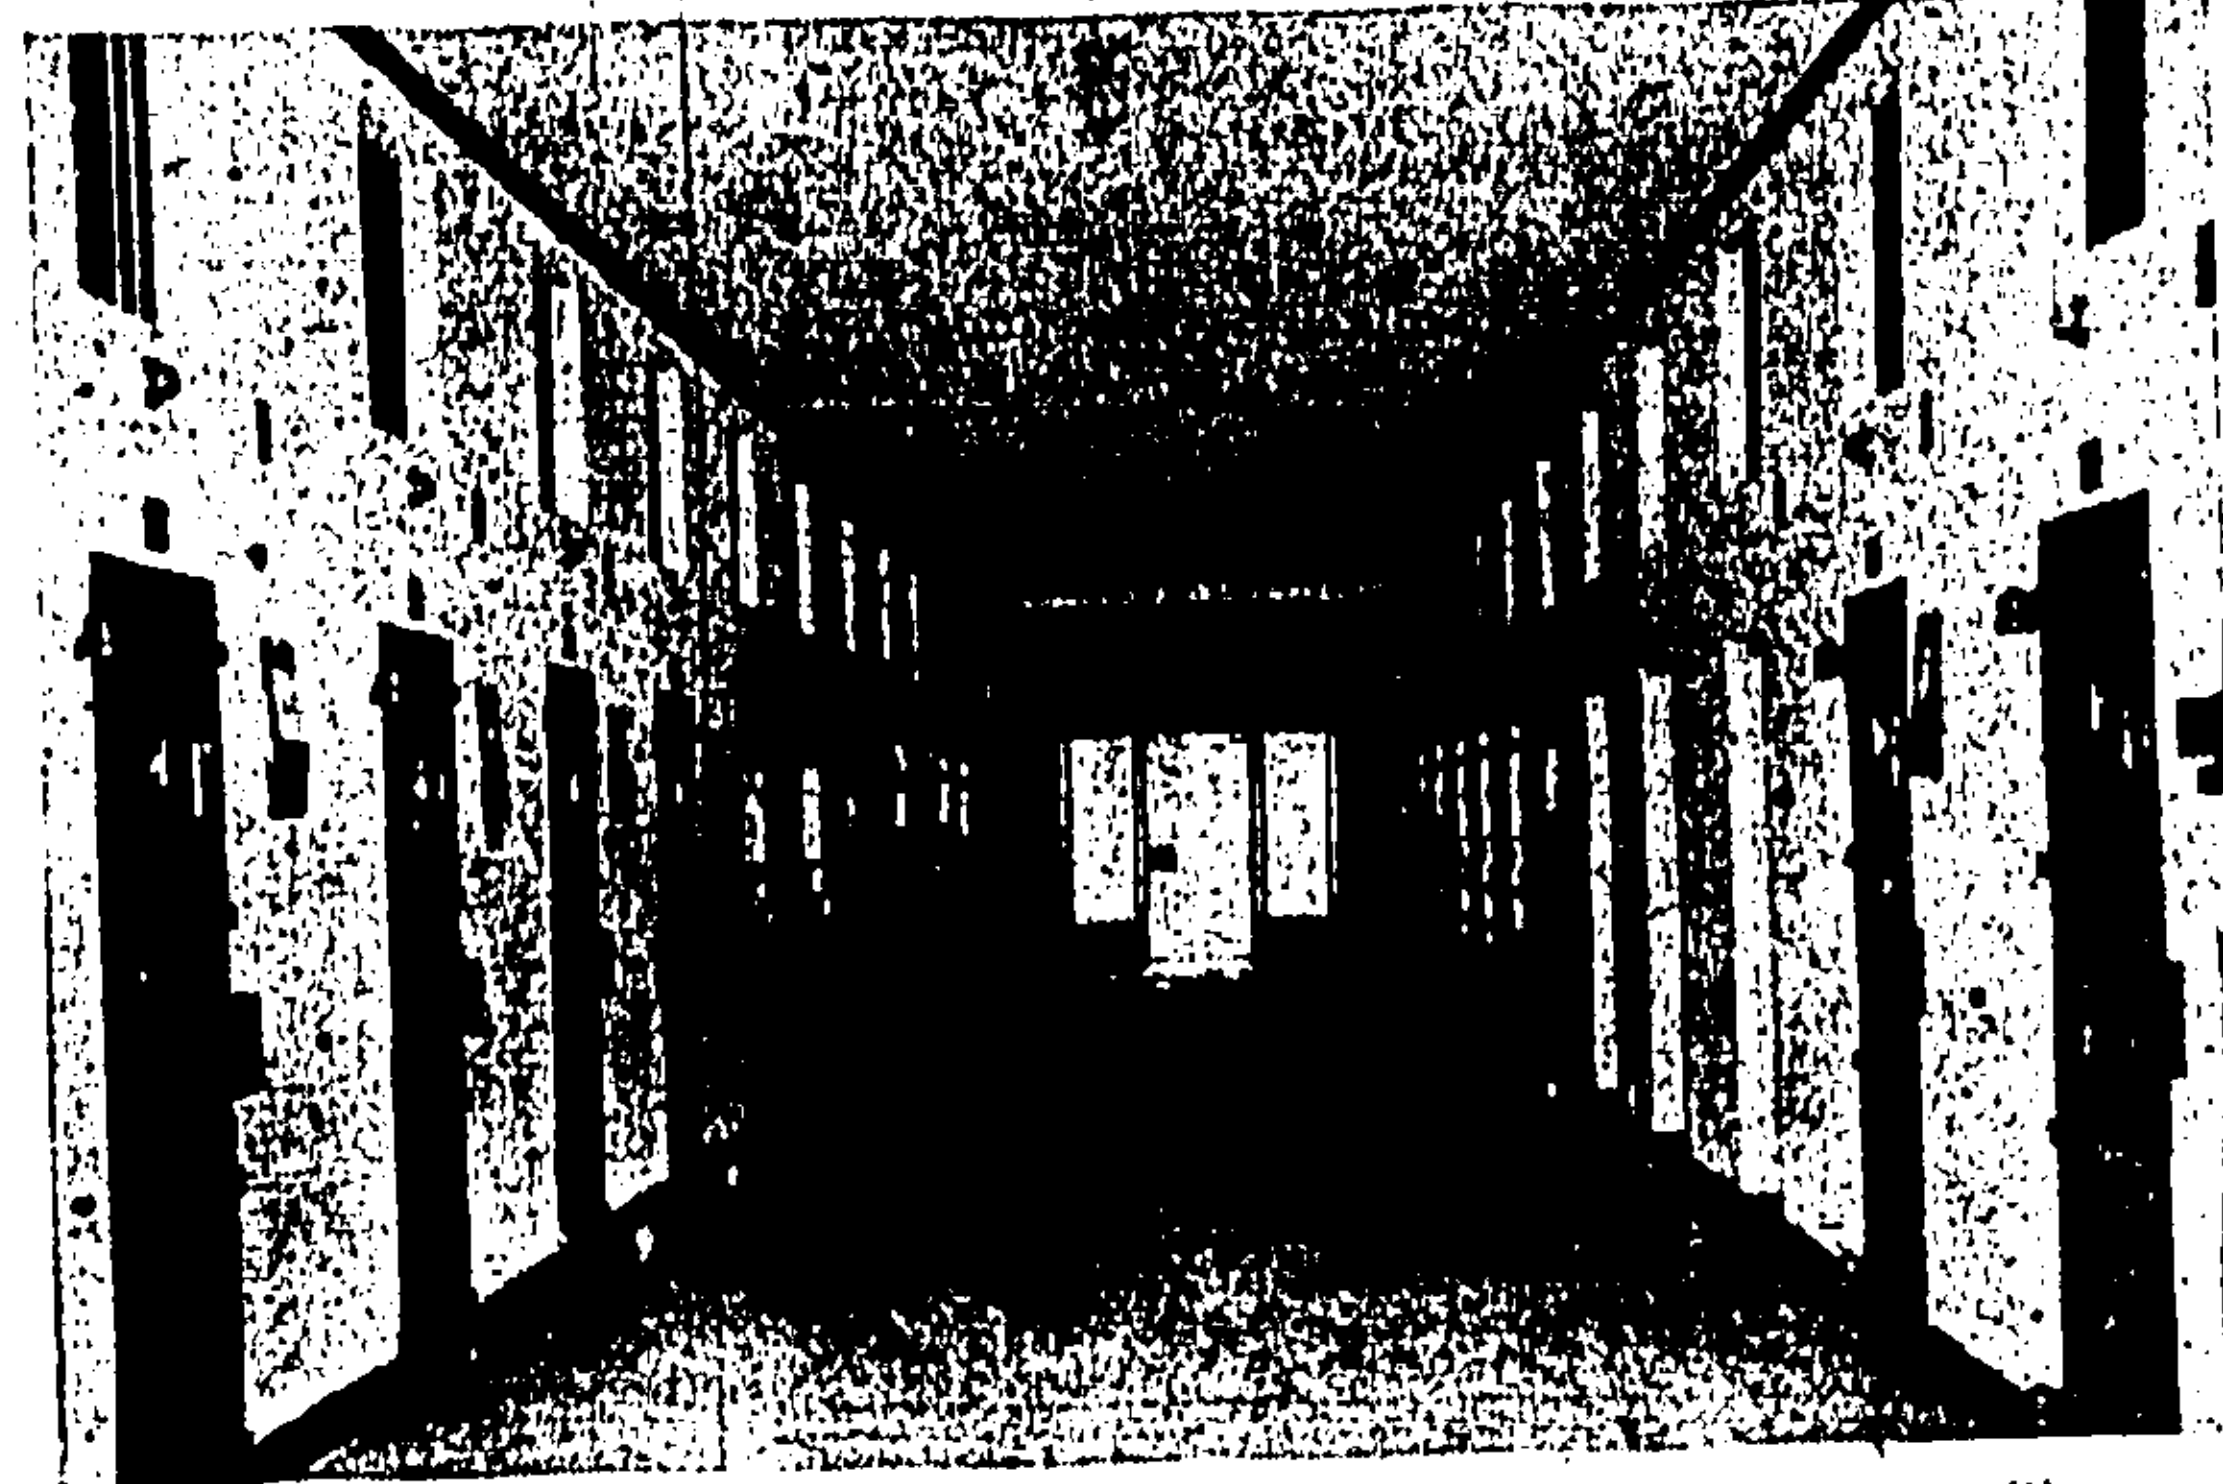

Republican Minister without Portfolio, making his first visit to Banka Island.

With agreement in principle to the restoration of the Republican Government to Jogjakarta (whence it was forcibly removed by the Dutch just before Christmas), the United Nations Commission sponsoring the present talks is turning to other points of difference. It is trying to find a formula to reconcile the two delegations on the degree of sovereignty to be exercised by the Republican Government, and on the Dutch demand for Republican commitments on a cease-fire and a date for a round table conference at The Hague.

The Republicans have asked for full sovereignty but the Dutch consider the reinstated Republican Government should have powers like those of the existing Indonesian Federal States.

The Republicans are unwilling to give the pre-commitments sought by the Dutch on a cease-fire and The Hague conference, but in the words of a Republican authoritative source "We have never rejected either a cease-fire or The Hague conference."

It is understood that the United Nations Commission is seeking, in consultation with both delegations, a form of agreement to bridge differences on these points. —Reuter.

A PRISONER'S LIFE AT STANLEY PRISON TODAY

Many newcomers to the Colony have wondered on reading the daily papers how offenders against the law fare in Stanley Prison.

What happens to these men after they are sentenced? How are they treated in a prison administered by British Colonial authorities, 10,000 miles from the watchdog of British prisons, the Home Office?

The Commissioner of Prisons for Hong Kong, Mr. W. Shillingford, in a special interview with a representative of the "Sunday Herald," answered some of the questions put to him on this subject, and later allowed a tour of the men's prison at Stanley to be made so that the conditions there might speak for themselves. Architecturally, the approaching felon's first glimpse of the prison is not one to strike any fear into his heart. Built in an enlightened age of prison architecture, Stanley Prison has none of the grim and forbidding grey stone-work that typifies the prisons of early Victorian times. The well-proportioned, light brick buildings and white surrounding walls would do credit to a holiday camp.

Once inside the massive gates, finger-printed, weighed, measured, and medically examined, scrubbed clean under the vigilant eyes of trustees and warders, and clad in the plain khaki of the prison uniform, the prisoner starts his new life.

If his term of imprisonment is two years or over, he is distinguishable from those with shorter sentences by a blue band around the jacket of his uniform. The broad arrow of prison garb was abolished long ago.

Put On Weight

One of the chief aims of the prison administration is what they term "segregation and classification" of the inmates. This system keeps the old offenders away from the men more amenable to reform, with shorter sentences.

The prisoner's day starts at 6.30 a.m. with breakfast, and he breaks off from work at 11 a.m. for a pint of congee, and another meal is provided at 4 p.m.

It is interesting to note that although the prisoners complain of the "inadequacy" of the food, over 50 per cent of them actually increase in weight within a few months of arrival. The diet has been scientifically drawn up to provide him with all the proteins and vitamins necessary to maintain good health, and includes meat, peas, beans, potatoes and leafy vegetables, rice and rice polishes (the latter to provide some natural immunity to the disease, Beri Beri).

Short-term prisoners are engaged chiefly on basket-making and labouring on a nearby rock clearance scheme to make room for an extension of the piggeries. One large gang of men are engaged at present on clearing up the bathing benches at Repulse Bay for the Urban Council.

Hospital Care

The industrial side of the prisoner's life offers a wide scope. He can learn weaving on hand looms, rattan furniture-making, carpentry, tailoring, laundry work and gardening. All the staff members and those of the prisoners themselves are made on the premises, thousands of rice, dust, and coal baskets are made for Government, and the total saving to public funds from this type of work is considerable.

For the sick there is an excellently equipped hospital with comfortable beds, polished floors and cream painted walls, an operating theatre that would do credit to any hospital, and special diets for advanced T.B. cases to combat the wasting effects of the disease.

Prisoners can earn remission of sentence up to one third (providing it does not reduce the time served to below one month) for industry and good behaviour, the method of assessing remission being to credit the men automatically on admission with the total possible, and then for any misbehaviour, which has to be proved at an enquiry, an appropriate reduction is made in this remission.

No Smoking

Cigarettes are not allowed in the prison, and the question of whether this forced abstinence cures or not appeared to be answered by the sight of a discarded cigarette-end being caught

Weizmann Dines With Cardinal

New York, April 30. President Chaim Weizmann of Israel was the guest at dinner last night of Cardinal Spellman at the Cardinal's residence, in what Israeli sources describe as an historic event for the two faiths.

The dining room was decorated with flags of the Vatican, Israel and the United States. The three flags were given to Dr. Weizmann after by Cardinal Spellman as a souvenir of the meeting.

While matters discussed were not divulged, Israeli sources said that throughout the dinner the greatest cordiality reigned. —United Press.

practically in mid-air by one member of an outside working party.

That there is an extremely healthy atmosphere in the prison there can be no doubt. The many hundreds of prisoners seen on the tour were well clothed, scrupulously clean and fairly content.

Prisoners may approach the Superintendent direct with any grievance they may have. Once during the tour the conducting official was approached and the man given a hearing.

There is little evidence of the overcrowding problem at Stanley, except in the figures available. The prison was built to hold 1,589 men and, from the day it was opened it has had considerably more than this figure inside its walls. The average strength for one year was 2,032.

TIME IS GETTING SLOWER NOWADAYS

Philadelphia, April 30.

The world is about to face a choice between two kinds of time because the earth's rate of rotation is slowing.

This is the message of the world's chief timekeeper, Britain's Astronomer Royal, Sir Harold Spencer Jones, chief of Greenwich time.

He is having trouble with the length of the day, he reported to the American Philosophical Society.

Because of gradual slowing in the earth's rotation, time today is not the same as in Babylonian days. Time is slower now because the earth takes longer to reel off 24 hours.

That will go on, Sir Harold said, until it will take 47 of the present days for the earth to make one turn on its axis.

In that day, too, the earth will always present the same face to the moon, because the moon's motion around the earth will be slowed. You will have to travel half way around the world then to see the moon, if you happen to live on the wrong side.

Sir Harold said that although this long day is too remote to be important now, its beginnings are about at the parting of the ways.

Until now clocks haven't been accurate enough to be bothered. But, Sir Harold said, the new atomic clock about to be built by the U.S. National Bureau of Standards will really differ from the time shown by present Greenwich methods of relying on the earth's rotation.

The atomic clocks will be correct. Mother earth will be wrong.

The earth's slow-down is due partly to the drag, that is friction, of tides in shallow seas. The moon raises these tides. It works as if the moon was using a rope to hold back the earth.

Other causes are the pull of other planets and probably the fact that the earth's outer crust of rock is rotating faster than its core, thus creating more friction.

Snags Over Italian Colonies

Rome, April 29.

Count Carlo Sforza, Italian Foreign Minister, is convinced that United Nations discussions on the future of Italy's former African colonies will be postponed since those solutions acceptable to Italy will not get the necessary two-thirds vote necessary for United Nations approval.

Those acceptable to the United Nations will cause only profound disillusion in Italy.

The Minister, recently back from Washington, was addressing the Foreign Affairs Commission of the Senate and Chamber of Deputies.

The United States and Latin American Republics are anxious to find a formula acceptable to the Italians, he said.

An Italian Foreign Ministry spokesman said today that Italy had never agreed to the partition of Ethiopia between Ethiopia and the Anglo-Soviet Sudan. She had always maintained that it is necessary to keep the country united and to guide its people towards independence, he added.

DEADLOCK IN TRUCE TALKS

Haifa, April 29.

The armistice talks between Syria and Israel have reached a deadlock, according to an Israeli source today. A Reuter despatch from the Syrian-Israeli border in Northern Galilee said the delegates at the talks sat for two and a half hours today without making any progress.

An Israeli liaison officer said wide gaps still exist between the attitudes of the two parties.

Here's the Ipana way that dentists say works! "And it's a pleasure!" adds Baba. Easy as 1, 2:

1. Between regular visits to your dentist, brush all teeth surfaces with Ipana at least twice a day.
2. Then massage gums gently as your dentist advises to stimulate gum circulation. (Ipana's unique formula helps stimulate your gums—you can feel the tingling)

Just do this regularly for healthier gums, brighter teeth, an Ipana smile. Ipana's extra-refreshing flavor leaves your mouth fresher, your breath cleaner, too. Ask your dentist about Ipana and massage. See what it can do for you!

Britain's Biggest War Games

London, April 30.

The British Army is to hold its biggest manoeuvres since the war this Summer. A War Office spokesman said that in the exercises, probably between 200,000 and 300,000 men will be engaged in the United Kingdom and in Germany. The manoeuvres will last on and off for six weeks to two months.

They were ordered by the Secretary for War, Emanuel Shinwell, to answer disquiet about the military preparedness of the Army and as an incentive to recruiting. Associated Press.

Spy Mania In Finland

Moscow, April 30.

A Soviet official news agency despatch from Helsinki, quoting a Finnish source, alleged today that 30 Americans are spying in Finland under the guise of Mormon priests.

Most of the Americans are young men and former officers, the despatch said, quoting the Finnish newspaper, "Vaapasauna".

The paper, according to the Soviet news agency despatch, quoted "trustworthy information" for its report that the "priests" are keeping in close touch with local Fascist agents all over Finland. Most are former Air Force officers and all speak Finnish fluently, it said.

These "missionaries," the paper is quoted as declaring, are mostly interested in getting into touch with clubs of reserve officers on the pretext of giving English lessons.

Anglo-U.S. Scheme For Libya

London, April 29.

Britain and the United States will submit a resolution giving the United Nations General Assembly the right to grant independence to Libya after 10 years.

The resolution, embodying an agreed Anglo-American plan for the former Italian colonies, will be placed before the Political Committee.

During the 10-year period Britain would be the trustee for Cyrenaica. The United States, France, Britain, Italy and Egypt would form a Committee to decide on trustees for the rest of Libya and report to the Assembly in September.

The scheme would recommend Italy as the trustee for her former colony in Somaliland. Western Libya would go to the Anglo-Egyptian Sudan, and the rest of this territory to Ethiopia. The future of the former Italian colonies has proved hitherto the gravest single item of disagreement among the United States, Britain and France.

It is not known in London whether France has been consulted about the move.

The five Powers proposed by Britain and the United States to make trusteeship arrangements for Libya are those recently suggested during the discussion among Arab and Latin American delegations as possible trustees.

The 10-year period before Libya could gain independence is the same as that proposed by the Soviet Union earlier this month. —Reuter.

PREMIER OF PAKISTAN WARNS: "DON'T TAKE US FOR GRANTED"

London, April 29.

Mr. Liaquat Ali Khan, Prime Minister of Pakistan, today warned all the nations of the Commonwealth against a tendency to take Pakistan for granted. He told a press conference here that Pakistan is not a nation of people made of clay and mud.

"These 80,000,000 people are made of flesh and bone, and they have very strong blood in their veins," he added.

The Prime Minister said that he had been worried to find in Britain a tendency to take Pakistan for granted. He thought that it would be a great mistake for Britain or any other member of the Commonwealth to go on doing so.

"Pakistan is willing and ready to make a contribution towards the ideals of the Commonwealth, but not as a camp follower," he said.

"I believe in the Commonwealth and so long as we are true to its ideals we shall be able to play an effective and useful part in world affairs."

Mr. Liaquat Ali Khan said that there had been an improvement in Pakistan's relations with India. Since the cease-fire in Kashmir there is no more tension. "But it would be hypocritical to say that relations will really be friendly so long as the Kashmir question is not settled satisfactorily."

Discrimination

"I hope we shall be able to settle all the problems between Pakistan and India, and that relations will be improved more and more in the future," he said that India becoming a Republic is not likely to affect relations with Pakistan. The Premier is satisfied with the Commonwealth Premiers.

Spiritual Barrier

In reply to another question, the Prime Minister said that Communism is only a name in Pakistan.

Pakistan's geographical position is such, however, that whenever any action is taken against Communism in neighbouring countries, they "just walk quietly into Eastern Pakistan."

"I believe that a Muslim country is not a fertile ground for Communism, provided the country concerned carries out a programme of social justice," he said.

Pakistan will continue to be a Commonwealth member as long as the Commonwealth is true to its ideals as an association of free, equal and independent nations, he said.

Pakistan has close relations with other Muslim countries but not with Muslims in the Soviet Republics. There is no reason, he said, why such relations with the Middle East Muslim countries should not be identified with Commonwealth relations.

Concerning the Commonwealth's stand against Communism, he said: "Materialism alone is not enough to withstand Communism. There must be a spiritual barrier and it is in this that the strength of the Muslim countries lies." —Reuter and United Press.

Pope Tells Priests To Fight

Vatican City, April 29.

The Pope told priests today that they must fight the falsehood which dominates the world with truth, and fight corruption with purity.

Addressing a group of 300 priests assembled in the Vatican to celebrate the fifth anniversary of the foundation of the Pontifical College, the Pope said:

"The human race is today at a decisive point in its history. The Church cannot remain a spectator. The falsehood which dominates the world we must fight with truth, and corruption we must fight with purity."

"These times demand from you priests stronger virtue, more ardent zeal and more intrepid firmness. You priests must make sacrifices and work hard." —Reuter.

PACIFIC TREATY SCOUTED

Bangkok, April 29.

Speculation about a Pacific defensive alliance has been limited so far to newspaper conjecture. Dr. B. V. Keskar, Indian Deputy Minister of External Affairs, said here today.

Asked at a news conference about the likelihood of such a pact, he declared: "Just because there is an Atlantic Pact, do not jump to the conclusion that a Pacific or Asian Pact will develop as a natural corollary."

Dr. Keskar arrived here today from Saigon, Indo-China, for a four-days' visit. He will leave for India on Monday.

Replying to a Siamese press reporter, Dr. Keskar said India is not attempting to take over leadership in Asia.

"India has tried wherever she can to give moral encouragement to such peoples as are trying to get self-government. There is a wrong impression in the minds of certain people that India is trying to take up the leadership of Asia, or of a certain region of Asia. This is not only far from the truth, but we have absolutely no intention of dreaming of any such project."

Dr. Keskar added: "Our only desire is to help morally those who ask for it." —Reuter.

Student's Daring Action

Athens, April 29.

A student, aged 24, forced a Dakota plane to land at Salonika today by threatening the crew of two Rumanians and two Russians with a gun.

The student, Stoyan Korm, boarded the aircraft at Temboara, Rumania, with 11 other passengers for Bucharest.

Working his way forward when the plane became airborne, he forced the crew at gun-point to change the course of the plane for Greece.

Describing himself as an anti-Communist, he asked Greek officials at Salonika to consider him a political refugee.

Orders were given tonight for the release of the plane, a Greek Greek General Staff statement said.

Anna Neagle Tells Her Secrets

When I Said 'No' To Mr. Cochrane

"Thank you, Mr. Cochrane, but I'm afraid the answer's 'No'."

It was early in 1930 and those unexpected words were gulped by a nervous, but inwardly determined chorus-girl named Marjorie Robertson.

She was turning down a chance which would have made hundreds of girls turn cartwheels with excitement—the chance of being in the chorus of C. B. Cochrane's next lavish, glittering musical show, "Evergreen."

It was a decision which was to be a milestone in her life. And since I was the girl concerned, I can honestly say that it was the hardest decision she had ever had to make!

Cochrane was frankly dumbfounded. He looked at me shrewdly and said: "No? And why?"

Another slight gulp. ("Was I making an awful mistake?")

Then—"Because, Mr. Cochrane, I've made up my mind to break away from the chorus and try for something bigger and better."

"Marjorie," said Mr. Cochrane, very gently, "do you think you're really cut out for the theatre? Why don't you get married, settle down and forget all about show business?"

Made Up My Mind

I knew that C. B. was completely sincere—but so was I, and his friendly advice wasn't even a temptation. I'd fully made up my mind that I didn't want to marry and settle down but that I did want a crack at some of the fame and fortune that I was convinced was to be found at the end of the rainbow called Shaftesbury-avenue.

What had I got with which to face the future? I took stock. I had my health and strength, a chorus-girl's experience in song-and-dance and a whole heap of ambition. Plus £70 in the bank—three years' skimpy savings. It was a comforting thought—that £70 nest-egg.

That was the moment when I decided that, come what may, I would in future bank a portion of my weekly earnings. I've never gone back on that decision.

What would the future hold? How could I know then that it was to hold many bitter disappointments and as many fantastic successes? How could I look into a crystal and see that one day that ambitious little chorus girl would portray Queen Victoria on the screen, be acclaimed by the world and be the innocent cause of over 70,000 people jamming Leicester-square at the film's premiere?

Would I have believed it if I'd been told that I would star in Hollywood?

Marjorie Robertson being the guest of honour at a banquet at Government House, Ottawa, being presented with the Gold Cup of All the Nations by Mussolini in Venice, being the representative of British Films at the Paris Exhibition? Absurd! But it was to happen.

How could I guess that one day I would have to pawn my few jewels to keep a major British film afloat... or that I would become the wife of one of Britain's foremost directors?

Perhaps it was as well that I couldn't look into the future. I would have flinched from such a stardust dream. After all, that sort of thing only happened in novels and on the films—NOT to young girls from Forest Gate, East London.

Slowly I walked past the London Hippodrome—without so much as a glance at the theatre that, so soon, was to bring me my first taste of stardom. I went into a cafe and, over a cup of tea, thought back on the Brief and Somewhat Undistinguished Career of Marjorie Robertson, Chorus Girl.

Father Was Doubtful

I remembered how, but for the bad luck of my father falling ill, those two words—chorus girl—might never have happened. He didn't want me to go on the stage although he was proud of my child success as a dancer. He was a sea-captain—and the sea is far removed from the theatre.

Although I always had an urge to go on the stage it was my brother, Stuart, who was clearly earmarked for a job as an entertainer. From an early age he sang beautifully and, as you all probably know, he became one of the earliest and most regular broadcasters.

Games and dancing were the only two pastimes at which I showed any promise at school. I was a very good bowler and a useful bit of cricket (and noissy soft-ball stuff, either!). I could swim and play tennis quite well (Kay Stammers became one of my first school friends) and very early I knew most of the finer points of soccer, being an ardent West Ham United fan. I still like the Hammer, though I admit that, later, I transferred my affections to the Arsenal!

As I drank my tea I remembered that it was a Mrs. Wordsworth who helped me early on in my dancing career. I went to her academy at South Kensington with the idea of becoming a dancing, games and gym mistress. Memories! I remembered how I got a job as a student dancing teacher in a West End hotel. How I loathed that job! I had to teach hotel guests to dance—and I got 10s. a lesson. I grew sick and tired of trying to steer fat, middle-aged men round the floor.

But the final straw was when I was expected to dine or sup with some of these men. I was to be paid one guinea to be escorted to a dance as partner to one of the hotel patrons. That was too much to expect! Still, during this period I was able to perfect my own dancing to an extent where I and a partner reached the finals of the famous Star Ballroom Dancing Championships. My partner was a man named Treves Skinner. I wonder where he is now?

One of the judges was Victor Silvester. Recently I danced to his band and remembered those far-off dancing nights—and I remembered another man who reached the finals. His name, now, is Ray Milland.

Then my father fell ill, and it was important that I should earn my own living. But how? Well, what not the stage?

When I thought of the difficulties of getting on to the stage I went slightly cold again at the realisation that, a few minutes before, I had just said "No" to the great Cochrane! I ordered some more tea and went on day-dreaming.

I remembered how, some years before, a dancing instructor named Gladys Dillon had taken an interest in me when I had attended her academy at Baker-street. So, when it came to getting on the stage I turned to her. Gladys got me the chance of an audition. True, it was only in the chorus—and at that only for a touring show.

But I was turned down flat! Then my luck changed. I was auditioned for a job with a Charles Revue. Two hundred girls were there—most of them very experienced—but somehow I landed one of the jobs.

The name of Charles and slick revue will always be linked. Alas, he suffered some of the downs of this up-and-down show business life. He fell on bad times and, not long ago, was earning a living as an extra in Hollywood. But recently I had a letter from him. Once again he is on the upward path, playing small but significant roles in Hollywood films.

Charles was a darling—but he sometimes had a very acid tongue. Once, I remember, he turned to me at rehearsal and said: "Marjorie Robertson, perhaps you have been at a funeral all the afternoon? Will you please smile a little sometimes?" I felt horribly crushed.

So I was "in" in the show... at £3 4s. a week! Two of the greatest trouper I met in those days—and they are both firm favourites of you all now—were Edmund Gwenn and Jessie Matthews.

I am far less concerned with the fact that "Teddy" Gwenn is a fine actor than that he showed himself to be a really kind man. He was one of the stars of the Charles show, yet at rehearsals he used to make a point of bringing this or that to the theatre at rehearsals just so that he could share them with the girls in the chorus.

I have very vivid memories of Jessie Matthews. Once later, I was understanding her in one song and dance and she had to go on a much-needed holiday. Before she went she took time off to coach me in the song and dance. That was quite a gesture from a star to an unknown!

Eventually, I had a piece of good luck. I was picked by C. B. Cochrane to be one of his girls in his incredibly popular Trocadero cabaret—then the centre of London's night life.

I enjoyed this late night work and it also offered new opportunities. At the same time I became one of the standby chorus girls in the great success at Drury Lane—"Rose Marie," towards the end of the phenomenal run—with Nelson Keys.

I remember "Rose Marie" for several reasons. On the day I joined the show my dear mother died, and I shall never forget how the other chorus girls helped me to get through that sad night. I also remember that I was paid £4 a week, and (with lots of them) started my first Post Office account.

Then, again, I recall how I was given the chance of understudying that happy comedienne, Clarice Hardwicke, but was so nervous that I turned down the chance! When I think of how many times I have declined offers through sheer, stark, nerves, often wonder how I ever managed to make progress in show business at all!

It was during "Rose Marie" that I was turned down—as a date—by my future husband! It was the night of the Chelsea Arts Ball and Nelson Keys had invited Herbert Wilcox to the show and then to the Ball. Herbert was escorting Dorothy Gish, but she had flu, and so he came to the theatre alone.

Nelson said to me: "How would you like to come to the Ball with a very pleasant man? I agreed, rather nervously. But I never got there. For when Nelson told Herbert who his blind date was, Herbert, who had seen my brief 'spot' in the show, was so unimpressed that he suddenly remembered another engagement.

After "Rose Marie," I went into "The Desert Song" and then into the revue "One Dam Thing After Another." In this revue, playing in the orchestra pit, was "Hutch"—his first appearance in England, I believe.

Then came "This Year of Grace" when I first saw the amazing Noel Coward.

He never addressed a word to me, naturally. Yet when I starred in "Stand Up and Sing," he sent me a very kind first-night note recalling that I had been in his show!

Unemployment

"After 'This Year of Grace' I hit one of those periods of unemployment which are so utterly depressing and worrying. My thoughts turned to the screen."

It was with no experience and little confidence that, on the advice of a young friend—John Paddy Chappell—I decided to trail down to Cricklewood studios in the hope of getting some extra work. It was a horrible day, cold, snowy, wet—and for over two hours I sat in a draughty waiting-room hoping to see the director.

At long last he came along and walked past me. Suddenly he stopped and came back. "You look frozen to death," he said kindly, "What do you want?" I explained and he told me that there were no vacancies but that if I sent a photograph of myself he would try to fit me into a film, later.

So a dejected, red-nosed shivering young chorus girl thanked the director timidly and went home. Little did she know that she had just left the man who, one day, she was destined to marry. Yes, the director was Herbert Wilcox.

By now that little cafe near the Hippodrome was preparing to shut. I had been day-dreaming for over an hour thinking back on my brief career as a chorus girl.

As I paid my bill I remembered that after this film disappointment things began to look rather more rosy. I went into "Wake Up and Dream," and became understudy to Jessie Matthews in one important song and dance, "Looking At You." And then, the big thrill, to America in the special hand-picked chorus which C. B. planned for "Wake Up and Dream."

America was really the turning point in my career up to that date. The sharp, invigorating atmosphere of New York gave me a confidence that I had always lacked.

I was lucky in America for I was fortunate enough to be described as Mr. Cochrane's Ideal "Young Lady," and, of course, I was interviewed and photographed a great deal.

One of my big memories of that trip was when we chorus girls were invited to see "Blither Sweet" in which Evelyn Laye was such an attractive and thrilling heroine. I remember sitting and thinking wistfully: "If only I could achieve as much as she has on the stage." One day I was to play her part in "Blither Sweet" on the screen!

I left the cafe. And as I walked past the Hippodrome again I asked myself one thing: "Marjorie, just why did you turn down the chance of being in 'Evergreen'?" And I had to admit that it was one thing that I had done. Someone in Mr. Cochrane's office had sent me an audition postcard and underlined "ESSENTIAL YOU WEAR A BATHING COSTUME."

I felt, justly, that that was a bit of a let-down after having been hailed as the Ideal Cochrane Chorus Girl! I told C. B. about this when he was congratulating me on my "Queen Victoria" film. He just chuckled and said, "What a lucky thing for you!" Little did I know that a tremendous break was just round the corner.

RUMOURS OF WAR

Our contributor, Mr. H. G.
W. Woodhead, inescapably arouses controversy when discussing his favourite topic, China. In today's issue he avers slightly across the map to consider that busy microcosm, Hong Kong. His observations are far from cheerful, but that in itself is not a justifiable ground for criticism. The article is undoubtedly thought-provoking, even if not presenting any strikingly new ideas.

Mr. Woodhead suggests that current events in China
"may have serious repercussions" on the colony, but his apprehensions centre solely on a hypothetical "panic-stricken incursion of another
'three quarters of a million Chinese,' if 'what happened in 1938, when the Japanese occupied Canton, may be regarded as a precedent." This, he says, would provide an insuperable problem with regard to housing, food and water.

The "China Mail" has, editorially, discussed this grave possibility in recent months, but is now coming round to the opinion that such fears lack confirmation—as yet.
Arrivals here from such centres as Shanghai during the past week give no indication of a large-scale exodus from Communist-menaced areas.
The numbers run into only a few hundreds, and people are in fact returning voluntarily to such centres as Tientsin and Peiping. It seems evident that the average Chinese does not regard the Communists with the same fear as he did the Japanese.
He does not expect death, imprisonment or even confiscation of his property, and knowing no other means of earning a livelihood than in his native town or village, he intends to stay there at least for the present.

Pursuing his argument,
Mr. Woodhead reiterates a previous claim that Hong Kong should restrict immigration from China. Many will agree with him that this is theoretically desirable, but we have authoritative confirmation that the government has no intention of instituting such a ban, partly because of the difficulties of implementing it.
For one thing, a very large staff (at present non-existent) would be required for administrative and checking purposes. Every one of the colony's 2,000,000 Chinese would require documents as a start, and would probably demand (as they did before the war) similar passes for their close relatives across the border. The ban would, also, obviously restrict considerably our function as an entrepot because of impositions on travelling traders.
Perhaps it should be done,
but it would be difficult.

Mr. Woodhead may have a good point when he urges the abolition of the ban on the import of gold. With China's currency now worthless, it is difficult to see how this can help either Cripps or the International Monetary Fund. But it often results in confiscation of a Chinese evacuee's entire savings. This the authorities might well ponder, together with the suggestion that Communist activities locally should now be regarded as a dangerous threat to peace and security.

Too Little And Too Late?

"Too little and too late" was the explanation generally given of the collapse of Great Britain's Far Eastern territories to the Japanese invaders in 1941-2.

At that time, of course, there was the not unreasonable excuse that the Empire's vast commitments in Europe and the Near East left little or nothing to spare for such areas as Malaya, Burma and Hong Kong. Is it now a question of "too little and too late" where Hong Kong is concerned in the near future?

One does not need to be an alarmist to point out that recent events in Mid-China may have serious repercussions upon Hong Kong in the not distant future. Yet a few days ago we had the Parliamentary Under-Secretary for the Colonies announcing that the British Government intended "to maintain Hong Kong as a peaceful haven of refuge from oppression, as a great centre of commerce, and as a cultural and educational beacon." While on the same date a London cable informed us that:

"There is at present no intention to send troops to Hong Kong because the more might be construed as provocative."

Provocative! Provocative to take necessary precautions to prevent a British Colony being over-run by Chinese Reds? If that is the attitude of the Home Government it should be countered by emphatic protests from responsible leaders in Hong Kong.
The idea of maintaining Hong-Kong "as a peaceful haven of refuge from oppression" may look very well on paper. But any well-informed resident must be aware that the limits to which this Colony can fulfil that role have already been over-stepped.
The population today is more than double that of the Colony's normal population in pre-war years.

And if what happened in 1938, when the Japanese occupied Canton, may be regarded as a precedent, we may expect a panic-stricken incursion of another three quarters of a million Chinese when (and if) the Reds approach that city. How are they to be housed, fed, occupied or supplied even with such a necessity as water?

Restrict Immigration

Surely one of the Colony's most urgent problems today is the adoption of drastic steps to restrict further uncontrolled immigration. I urged this two years ago. In urging it with greater emphasis today I add the warning that unless this problem is tackled at once, Hong Kong may well become untenable by reason of a monstrous burden of over-population for which neither food, nor other vital necessities can possibly be provided.

"Too little and too late?" It is common knowledge that the Defence forces of Hong Kong for external and internal security are inadequate. The minimum military force required for such security has been authoritatively put at two Brigades, or at least 6,000 officers and men, and as most of their activities would be conducted within the colony, coastal patrols, it would be necessary to reinforce them, for purposes of internal security, by substantial forces of Volunteers, Police Reserves, and other Emergency Units.

These security measures cannot be improvised at a few days' or even weeks' notice. If troops cannot be spared from the Home Country, this is a problem on which the co-operation of the Dominions should be invoked. They might also be expected to assist in providing the Colony with a Combatant Air Force.

It has been said that aircraft can be flown in from Singapore within a few hours or days.
That may be so, but the necessary ground crews and organization, supplies, ammunition, etc., could not. And complex roadjustments would become important to enable a Combatant Air Force to function from an aerodrome whose limited facilities and area have to cope with the entire commercial and passenger traffic to the Colony.

One or more large Aircraft Carriers might ease the situation, but are they in commission, and available for Far Eastern service today? Complacency may sometimes be a virtue. So far as Hong Kong is concerned it must be regarded as criminal today.
A comprehensive programme for external and internal defence ought to be prepared without a moment's delay.

By H.G.W.
WOODHEAD

Wishful Thinking

For many months now people in Great Britain and many Britons in the Far East, have been indulging in wishful thinking, in the delusion that as the Chinese Reds have singled out the United States as Public Enemy No. 1, they should receive the same friendly treatment by the Communists. Surely this delusion should have been shattered by the events of the past 10 days.
The following Moscow wire, China's communists have misrepresented peaceful naval measures for the safety of British nationals in the danger zones as acts of aggression, have distorted the facts to make the resulting propaganda attack upon their participation in the war on their side. One cannot count upon any change of heart or of attitude as the Reds move Southward to the obvious policy of the British and Hong Kong Governments, as regards this Colony, should be to prepare for the worst, even if they hope for the best.

The most serious threat to the Colony in the immediate future is likely to be internal. And it seems time to consider whether it is compatible with law and order to continue to tolerate such Communist activities in the Colony as the publication of newspapers and other periodicals, and a Communist News Agency Cocktail Party immediately following the fall of Nanking.

I question whether the contention that it is better to have the local Reds out in the open is a sound one. Only a fraction of their activities are in the open, anyway. And suppression of their subversive propaganda would not drive underground agitators who are already ground agitators. It would tend to remove open incitement to sedition and subversive activities at a time when the concern of the administration and all residents should be to encourage loyalty and public service among all the inhabitants of this over-populated Colony, and reducing, if not eliminating, the risks of Communist-fomented strikes and local unrest.

Within War Zone

Whether we like it or not,
Hong Kong is now within the China War Zone, and administered accordingly. Various policies which have been formulated in the past cannot be regarded as applicable today. If Chinese are continue to be permitted to enter the Colony, even in restricted numbers, the ban on the import of gold, enforced in a vain effort to uphold China's depreciated currency, should be removed.

Gold bars and jewellery now often represent the entire portable wealth of such immigrants, many of whom are transients who are using the Colony as a way-port to areas in South China. Pauperising these unfortunate by confiscating their only resources is not only an outrage, it is contrary to elementary notions of equity and justice.
It may well deprive worthy Chinese, as well as individuals of other nationalities, of the means of aiding themselves and their families over the present emergency.

I have, I hope, made it plain that Hong Kong cannot conceivably become a "haven of refuge" for the millions of Chinese who would like to escape from Red China. I suggest that our first duty in providing such a refuge should be to our own nationals, after that, to non-Chinese whose national or political affiliations expose them to perils from Communist domination.

Much has been done by International Relief organizations to remove Jewish and other "displaced" refugees from danger areas in China in spite of the illiberal attitude adopted by the Home Kong administration, even to transients in these categories.
Why should worthy Chinese receive preferential treatment over nationals of other countries—or stateless people—many of whom have been in the employment of British and Allied firms?

I am glad to see that some action is about to be taken with reference to members of the Portuguese community in Shanghai who may desire to be resettled. The Hong Kong Government might well take the initiative in co-operating with the Portuguese authorities for the resettlement of these unfortunate in Macao.

Future Security

Finally I would like to emphasize that the future security of Hong Kong should be a matter of vital concern to all residents of both sexes. The community should to the utmost of its ability make itself responsible for internal security, looking to the Home Government only for essential measures for external protection. It is time that the attitude of complacency and laissez faire was abandoned, and replaced by general recognition of civic responsibilities.
Many residents have responded to the Government's appeal:

"If you wish to help the Colony in an emergency you can do one of four things NOW."
ENROL in a combatant unit of the Hongkong Defence Force.

ENROL in the Essential Services Wing of the Hongkong Defence Force.

ENROL in the Special Community.

OFFER to help when the emergency comes.

It is futile, today to air past grievances or experiences as reasons for refusing to join up.
When the emergency comes it can only be met effectively by those who are.

"Forthright, accoutred accepted
—alert from the well of sleep!
Sure no serious-minded Hongkongite anticipates an answer in the affirmative to the question:
'Will you pray them or preach them, or print them, or ballot them back from your shores?
The possibility of an emergency is no longer an idle dream.
It now seems bound to come, sooner or later. And recognition of its gravity by the Hong Kong community seems to me to be the surest way of ensuring effective action on our behalf by the British and Dominion Governments.

THE NEXT BRITISH GOVERNMENT

The manifesto put forward by the Labour Party executive as the basis of the appeal on which the Government will go to the country next year has much more than a party interest.

At the outset one is bound to wonder whether the party really wishes to win the next election. How much better it might be for it to see its opponent returned to power with a majority of 16 or 20 only!

For consider what the position of the next Government will be.
With no reserve of taxable capacity to draw on, with no visible prospect of restoring the dollar exchange, with the seller's market abroad altering to a buyer's market (in which already the shadows of German and Japanese competition are beginning to lengthen), it will have to face the ending of Marshall Aid in 1952, the rapid rise in the cost of existing social services, and the certainty of heavy rises in the cost of national defence.

It will have to do so at a time when the foundation of the entire modern British economy—cheap and abundant coal—has been replaced by dear and insufficient coal; with but a limited prospect (no matter what Government is in power) that the National Coal Board can restore its abundance, and little or none that it can reduce its price.

The public does not yet realize the full grimness of this outlook, but it would be going as far as to the leaders of either great party to suggest that they do not.

Inevitably they must.

And yet the natural desire of each party for office must be stronger than usual among their rank and file. The Labour party see themselves as having in the life-time of the present Administration achieved a remarkable success.

By Scrutator

Not since the first and greatest Administration of Mr. Gladstone (1868-1874) has British Parliamentary history exhibited an equal case of an anti-Conservative Government taking office under pledge to make quasi-revolutionary changes and successfully making so many of them.

How natural for Socialists to crave a second term of office in order to pile new claims upon the gains of the first! How equally natural for Conservatives to forget all risks in their eagerness to arrest the movement!

No Pulling Of Punches

In truth neither side can afford to pull its punches. A party which recalled from the responsibility of office because they seemed heavy critics of the country's trust.
Yet it is for each to show some awareness of the difficulty. Does the Labour programme do so?
Is the Labour Party bent on the polls with no programme but that of consolidating its gains it might well have a maximum chance of winning. And in some matters that view has prevailed.

Thus no new costly social services are proposed; and the need for increased national production before any can be contemplated is stated with Crippian clearness. So is the impossibility of reducing defence expenditure while the Soviet spends so much on armaments.

But not all the programme is like that. The extremists have bitten too. Nationalisation of the cement industry, of the sugar industry, of industrial insurance and much other insurance, an option to nationalise Imperial Chemical Industries; and a free hand to start competitive public enterprises in other trades.

All embodied in a kind of jelly of political phrases, now threatening—"There must be no feather-beds for those who fail the nation"; now enticing—"Labour will continue to do everything possible to bring prices down";
now bribing—"when the need arises, the Government must be ready to put more money into the pockets of the people."
Well, on politics I say no more.

Two Issues

But there are two issues raised in this manifesto on which differences might not be run on party lines. The first is that of expenditure. The second is that of nationalisation, on which it says something harmful.

THE NEW INDIA

By G. WARD PRICE

When India's Premier, Pandit Nehru, arrived recently in London to announce to the Conference of Commonwealth Prime Ministers his country's intention of becoming a Sovereign Independent Republic he was able to give a good account of his stewardship during the 20 months of India's existence as a Dominion.

Of course, he had the advantage of taking over the Government of India as a going concern.
When they were carrying on their campaign against the British Raj the present rulers of India used to abuse the Indian Civil Service as red-tape-bound, overpaid bureaucrats.

Since they have succeeded to the responsibilities of office they have come to realise how great an asset to India are the system and traditions not only of the Civil Service but of the British-trained Indian Army.

Proof of the value of the strong framework with which Britain endowed India is to be found in the contrast between the efficiency of the Central Government and the middle and corruption that prevail in some of the seven provincial Governments.

Settle Scandals

These are dominated by the local Congress Party, whose leaders have nothing like the vision and experience of the men at the head of the Central Government, with the result that the Central Congress Party in Delhi is constantly having to intervene to settle political scandals in the provinces.

In the critical process of transforming the political structure of 320,000,000 peoples intricately divided by religion, race, and language, great difficulties have arisen and have been faced with resolution and resource.

The next largest problem the Indian Government had to solve was the merger of the former semi-independent princely States with the main body of the Indian Dominions.

In only two cases—Jannagadh and Hyderabad—was pressure necessary to bring this about.
The Rajahs recognised that they could not defend their princely prerogatives against the Central Government. They have been given ample pensions in perpetuity.

India's self-administration has begun with the good fortune of having at the head of her affairs three men of outstanding ability, Governor-General Rajagopalchari is a strong character who shares with Pandit Nehru the best known of the three Indian statesmen forming the inner Cabinet which controls the policy of India's Government.

He has a dual personality, being as much at home in London as in Delhi. A great English public school and a university have laid their unmistakable hallmark upon him—yet, in spite of a British upbringing and astronomical Indian birth, he has intense sympathy with the Hindu masses, which makes him their idol.

The third figure in this small and brilliant team is Sardar Patel, Vice-Premier and a simpler and more rugged type, less of an orator than Nehru, but a shrewd, determined administrator.

Drafting Formula

They have raised expectations which experience of power leads them to regard with less enthusiasm.

It was unfortunate, for example, that their formula for drafting the Constitution should have specified India to be an "Indopendent Sovereign Republic."

If the word "State" had been used, the question of India's future relations with the Commonwealth need not have arisen, as the independence of all Dominions was recognised by the Statute of Westminster as far back as 1931.

Nehru's attitude in London on this question will depend upon how far he is prepared to face the criticism, reproaches, and possible desertion of some of his Congress colleagues if he comes back without having renounced India's allegiance to the British Crown.

But those well placed to judge
Indian political trends assure me that he could carry the day even were he to abandon the idea of an Indian Republic.

Indians are by instinct heroworshippers who follow men rather than policies, and should it come to showdown with the anti-British extremists Nehru's ascendancy over the people is great enough to give him victory.

Russian Reply To U.S. Questions Delivered

Take taxation first. The country's greatest weakness today would be the eyes of Mr. Gladstone be that it has no reserve of taxable capacity. Estimates of the proportion of our total national income which is collected in taxes and rates agree that it is more than 40 per cent. No other country approaches such a rate; comparative estimates published in the January issue of the "National Provincial Bank Review" showed figures for 1946 as Great Britain 41.7 per cent., Sweden 18.9 per cent. Thus Sweden, the Mecca of our Socialists, bears less than half our tax burden, while even wealthy America, with its ready double (State and Federal) system of government, bears little more than half.

What happened was that in the war's crisis, patriotism overrode our taxes to the limit. The highest incomes paid 19s. 6d. in the £. That was reasonable over a short period to save the nation. It is not reasonable to prolong it indefinitely for other purposes, and to leave no reserve whatever for a future crisis. It should be a first aim of every Government to restore reserve capacity.

Secondly, nationalisation. In my view, what has been wrong with this Government's record has not been that it has nationalised, but that it has nationalised on confederate lines. Each in the century evolution, the Socialists were all against it.

Because, they said, it is desirable to take over coal or railways or electricity, that is no reason for punishing the particular people who own shares or debentures in those industries. Yet that is exactly what the Government have done.

Now that was unjust, and injustice is poison. It threatens to discourage all industrial investment. Investors have to ask themselves, not whether a concern is sound and deserves to prosper, but whether it is likely to be nationalised.

If it is, they must avoid it like the plague, a virtue can save sugar and cement have both served the nation remarkably; yet both are to be swallowed because they are plump.

What, then, is to be said about a reference like that of the manifesto to ICI? Here is a vast concern vital to national defence, and also a great earner of foreign exchange. If the Socialists took it for nationalisation, at least the responsibility would pass to them.

But instead they announce that they will nationalise it. They affix the plague-ticket; notify investors to beware; and leave it to the company to carry on thus handicapped.

Surely that is not a proper line for any Government to adopt. After all, a manifesto of the Government's party is a Government manifesto.

BAN ON NOTES LIFTED BY SA

Capetown, April 29. South African control on the import and export of Bank of England notes was lifted today, the Treasury announced. Any person may now bring into the Union of South Africa, or take out, an unlimited number of notes without restriction.—Reuter.

Dr. Philip Jessup, American delegate to the United Nations, met Jacob A. Malik, Soviet delegate, yesterday apparently to receive the Soviet answer to American questions about lifting the Berlin blockade.

M. Malik invited Dr. Jessup to a meeting at the Russian United Nations delegation's headquarters in New York.

Western circles in the United Nations immediately speculated that M. Malik propose to Dr. Jessup that a conference of Foreign Ministers should meet about May 25 in Paris for a full dress review of the whole Berlin Problem.

During a meeting of the Steering Committee of the United Nations Assembly, M. Malik suddenly urged the Assembly to set a deadline for 1 p.m. EST on May 18 to complete its work.

The adjournment proposal was made by the Russian just as the American delegation was announcing elsewhere that M. Malik had asked Dr. Jessup to meet him.

The adjournment of the Assembly on the date proposed would permit key delegates to sail for Paris in time for the Council of Foreign Ministers. Andrei Gromyko and possibly M. Malik are expected to participate in any meeting of the Foreign Ministers of Britain, France, the United States and Russia.

Western sources say that the only extra to a meeting of the Foreign Ministers Council once the Russians have lifted the Berlin blockade would be an agreement on the list of definite points to be discussed.

Report Denied. These sources said that they are ready to meet in Paris on May 25 if the blockade is lifted. They said also that it would break up the conference about the middle of June if it becomes apparent that Russia is interested only in propaganda speeches.

Mr. Porter McKeever, U.S. delegation spokesman at the UN, denied a published report that there is an Anglo-American proposal relative to plans to be advanced in the meeting of the Council of Foreign Ministers, if one is to be held.

The report said that the two powers would ask the Ministers to agree upon the merger of the Soviet-occupied zone of Germany with the Western German Federal government into a single federal state.

The report said that France had not agreed to the Anglo-American proposal nor the

JAPANESE REDS LOSE SUPPORT

Tokyo, April 30. Public support for Japan's Communist Party is waning rapidly, according to the capital's evening newspaper, the Tokyo Shimbun. The paper, quoting the results of its recent survey, said that 25 per cent of the voters who had supported the Communist Party in the last election have changed their views.

The Democratic Liberals have recaptured their position as the most popular political party, commanding 40 per cent of the public support. The Tokyo Shimbun said. The Social Democrats follow with 17.5 per cent, the Democrats with 5.7 per cent, and the Communists with 3.2 per cent.—Reuter.

Satisfactory Progress In Berlin Talks

New York, April 30. A United States spokesman said last night that American-Russian talks over lifting the Berlin blockade are proceeding satisfactorily. He indicated that the private conversations between the U.S. Ambassador-at-large, Philip C. Jessup, and the Soviet Deputy Foreign Minister, Jakob A. Malik, will continue, but gave no date for the next meeting.

There is no official word whether any agreement has been reached.—Associated Press.

A Royal Wedding In Portugal

Lisbon, April 29. Prince Joao-Orleans and Braganza, aged 32, brother of the Pretender to the Throne of Brazil, today married the Egyptian Princess, Fatima Toussoun, aged 28, sister-in-law of King Farouk, of Egypt.

The wedding took place at the summer resort of Sintra, near Lisbon, at the House of the French Pretender, Henri, Count of Paris.

The Prince a member of the Braganza family, which once ruled the Republic of Brazil, works for Pan-American Airways in Rio de Janeiro.

The Braganza family, together with their wives and husbands, live in Rio on incomes from property and investments.

A handful of young monarchists pay court to the Pretenders, who have little or no hope of a throne.

Princess Fatima is the widow of Prince Hassan, who was killed in a car accident in France three years ago.—Reuter.

Israel Wants Her Frontiers Fixed

Lausanne, April 29.

Israel is trying to put the question of her permanent frontiers into the foreground of the peace talks here, an Israeli spokesman disclosed today.

Preliminary talks started on Wednesday between Jewish delegates and representatives of Syria, Transjordan, Egypt and the Lebanon under the auspices of the United Nations Palestine Conciliation Commission.

An Israeli spokesman said early agreement on the frontier question would clear the way for a general peace settlement. He stressed his Government's interest in making a peace settlement before the future of some 800,000 Arab refugees is discussed.

Discussion is not expected to get down to brass tacks level until early next week, after the arrival of the Arab and Israeli delegation leaders.

Members of the Conciliation Commission, including the

Embassy "Not Spy Centre"

St. Louis, April 29. M. Jozef Winiewicz, Polish Ambassador to the United States, denied here that the Embassy at Washington is a spy centre.

It was pictured as such by General R. Mogenski, former Embassy official, to the House Committee on Un-American Activities. M. Winiewicz told reporters: "Certainly we are interested in information but only to show the United States in a proper light to our Government."

"An matter of progress everyone is interested in atomic energy but not as a matter of spying."—Reuter.

MOTHER'S ADVICE WAS "KRUSCHEN"

For Terrible Pains In the Back. It was advice from her mother that led this woman to take Kruschen Salt for her backache. Before she had finished the first bottle, she was feeling better. This is the letter she wrote:—

"About this time last year I had terrible pains in my back and was prostrate for three weeks. I could not even rise in bed. I tried several will-known remedies, but to no avail."

Then I wrote to my mother, telling her of my trouble. She wrote to me by returning of post urging me to try Kruschen Salt. I immediately bought a bottle, and I can truthfully say before I had taken the fifth dose I could sit up. I kept on taking them, and in less than two weeks I was about again. I am never without this wonderful medicine now, and the little daily dose keeps me fit and well."—(Mrs.) A. G.

Unless the kidneys function properly, certain acid wastes, instead of being expelled, are allowed to pollute the bloodstream and produce (rheumatic symptoms) Backache, rheumatism, and stone-like fatigue. Kruschen Salt is one of the finest diuretics or kidney purgatives available for stimulating the kidneys to excrete acid impurities.

NUDITY ON STAGE ATTACKED BY MORALS COUNCIL

London, April 29.

The Public Morality Council, in its annual report published today, attacks the disastrous toleration of nudity on the stage by the British authorities.

The Council is a 50-year-old influential body on which Christian denominations and Jewish congregations are represented. Its patron is the Archbishop of Canterbury, and its President, the Bishop of London.

The report complains of the recent multiplication of productions which make of nudity a special feature, and said: "It is hard to see where any line can be drawn unless the exhibition of nudity be totally prohibited. (As the law stands in Britain at present, nudity is allowed on the stage, provided the show-girls remain completely immobile.)"

The Council added, presumably referring to a Folies Bergere Revue, from Paris, at present showing in the provinces and which may come to London: "Many salacious and most harmful productions are now touring the country, exciting themselves on the grounds of art, and it is common knowledge that a Continental production is to be imported in its entirety for the benefit of the patrons of this type of alleged entertainment."

"Bawdy Comedies"

The Council will not cease to protest until the exploitation of nudity on the stage is definitely forbidden.

The report also criticises a continuance of the policy of providing financial support from Government sources for the revival of the "Restoration comedies."

The plays, it said, were regarded in their day as bawdy, decadent, and unfit for public presentation.

It is lamentable that—notable for their religious indifference and slackness in morals—support from public funds should be forthcoming for plays which present religions as contemptible and sexual morality as absurd.

The report adds that it hopes the British Broadcasting Corporation will not in future And room for Restoration comedies in its programmes.—Reuter.

Her Second Sentence Of Death

Dublin, April 29.

Mrs. Mary Agnes Daly, aged 27, of Dublin was sentenced to death for the second time at the Central Criminal Court here tonight for the hammer murder of Mrs. Gibbons, aged 83, as she was praying in a Dublin Church last August 10.

The jury recommended mercy. Mr. Justice Gavan Duffy did not den the black cap as is customary for pronouncing the death sentence.

Mrs. Daly was first sentenced to death last November 12 and the execution was set for December 1. She appealed and after she had spent 11 weeks in the condemned cell, the Dublin Supreme Court on January 24 quashed the conviction and sentence and ordered a new trial.

Mrs. Daly pleaded self-defence and said Mrs. Gibbons had attempted to steal her handbag.—Reuter.

Nazi Pattern In America?

Washington, April 29.

Some of the Legislative Committee investigating subversive activities in the United States are strikingly reminiscent of the wave of anti-intellectualism which formed an early part of the Nazi rise to power in Germany, according to Dr. Edward Condon, Director of the National Bureau of Standards.

"The Nazi formula is being applied here with practically no variation from the way the Nazis were using it just 15 years ago," he told a meeting of the American Physical Society here.

He warned the scientists, some of whom helped to develop the atom bomb, that there is growing in this country a wave of anti-intellectualism which is violently opposed to free speech and free discussion.—Reuter.

WHAT HAPPENED IN SUITE 421

By Harry Whittington

Pat felt pleasantly surprised that the house was such a nice appearing place. And yet, why not a smart apartment for the girl who won a rich man's son like Rodney Harling?

Pat rang Marjorie's apartment bell several times, but there was no response. The cabbie grew restive, and Raffigan then pressed on the button labelled: Casperlor Cummings, Manager. Soon a small moustached, dapper man appeared at the door.

"I'm looking for Miss Gammage," Raffigan declared. "There's no answer to her bell. Do you mind if I come in and wait for her?"

The little man regarded him sharply for a moment, then said: "Well, you can wait in the hall lobby, if you like."

"I find that I've left my wallet at my hotel," Raffigan smiled engagingly. "Would you mind, Mr. Cummings, paying my taxi bill for me? I'll repay you as soon as I see Miss Gammage." The hotel manager responded graciously. With the cabbie gone, Raffigan found himself alone in the lobby, the obliging boniface returning to his office.

There was a public telephone booth near the end of the lobby. Raffigan knocked on the manager's door, smiled again and borrowed a nickel. He stepped into the booth and dialled Harling's home.

After a moment, a voice answered and Raffigan caught his breath. It was Sylvia's! She had dared to return to Harling's house. Evidently she'd thought Raffigan had been "done in" for good or frightened away.

On a quick hunch, he silenced his voice and said smoothly, "This is the manager of the Arbor Apartments, I'd like to speak to Mr. Harling on an urgent matter."

"Oh, Mr. Cummings!" Sylvia trilled. Pat felt his heart pounding. The next voice he heard was Harling's.

"This is Raffigan," he all but whispered. "Don't let anyone know I'm talking to you. Not even Sylvia. Call me Cummings as she just did..."

"Yes, Mr. Cummings. What is it now?"

"I need a thousand dollars," Raffigan said. "I've been slugged and picked bare. Where can you get the money to me at once?"

"Why," the old man hesitated. "I'm sorry to hear that, Mr. Cummings. I can send my chauffeur to the Arbor Apartments."

"Do that," Pat said. "Tell him if I'm not here to wait for me."

Pat hung up. Soon he decided against waiting downstairs for Marjorie. Stealthily he mounted stairs to the fourth floor. Her door was No. 421.

Pat tried the locked door. He went down the hallway, climbed a rear fire escape to the roof, crossed the flat top where were signs of much sun bathing and recreation, and went down another fire escape on a courtyard of the building.

He found the window of Marjorie's apartment unlocked and stepped into a small, smartly furnished front room. The first thing he saw was a large, framed picture of Harling's missing son bearing the scrawled words: "To my loving Marjorie, always Rodney." The photo revealed a nice looking man, in his middle twenties.

The room was in perfect order. An open door led off to the kitchenette, another was closed. This one Raffigan opened and saw that the frilly, fragrant bedroom was as neatly ordered as the front room. Pat crossed to the closet, pulled open the door. One expensive evening gown, a filmy lounging robe, two pairs of gold shoes. The bureau drawers and vanity were empty.

The bathroom door was locked. Raffigan looked about for a key. There was none. He put his shoulder against the door, forced it with minimum noise.

He looked down in horror. There, sprawled across the bathroom floor was Rodney, the man of the picture in the front room—Harling's son.

Pat now knew how dead Rodney Harling could get. Very dead.

CHAPTER IV

Leaving the bathroom door open, Raffigan rushed to the telephone on a front room side table. Calls went through a switchboard downstairs, probably in Cummings' office. He spoke firmly into the mouthpiece: "Get me the Police Homicide Bureau."

"Just a moment," said the operator.

Then Pat heard the silky voice of Manager Cummings on the phone.

"Hello—Hello. Who is this?"

Raffigan put down the phone and turning, found himself staring into the face of a lovely blonde woman in a red dress. She was wearing a tiny red hat with a bright green feather in it. In her white gloved hand was a small automatic.

"Who are you?" she asked sternly. "My name's Raffigan. I just found a dead man in the bathroom there." He nodded toward the picture. "Him. He's been shot. I thought I'd call the police."

The girl for a moment seemed shocked, but she recovered quickly and asked: "Do you think that wise? You've broken into my apartment. You say you found a man dead in here. How do I know you didn't kill him?"

"He's been reported dead twice before," Raffigan replied. "But don't worry, I didn't get the police." Mr. Cummings intercepted the call—"Cummings?" He saw the girl's face go white.

At that blanched look, Raffigan frowned. He'd been figuring swiftly ahead. Perhaps Cummings and this Gammage dame might be hooked in a shakedown involving Rodney Harling and his father. But something was wrong with that angle. That was evident in the frightened eyes staring at him!

They heard movement in the hallway outside Marjorie's room. He saw her hands trembling, her eyes darting about the room as though she were cornered.

"You better get out of here, and get quick!" Marjorie snapped as she whirled and locked the door, bolting it as an added precaution.

Pat leaped across the space between them, and dragged her, kicking and squirming, to the floor.

The small automatic clattered out of her fingers.

She opened her mouth to scream, and Pat clamped his hand down over it, hard. He felt her teeth sink into his palm as she bit with all the strength in her jaws, but he held on.

There was the sound of a key working the lock of the door. Raffigan listened tautly until this attempt to enter was abandoned. Then there was a sharp, imperative knock.

"Miss Gammage! Miss Gammage!" It was Cummings' insistent voice.

"Answer him," Raffigan whispered tensely, doubling a fist. "Or you won't look pretty, baby."

Her eyes blazing, Marjorie forced her voice to sweetness. "I'm here, Mr. Cummings."

"You sound odd," Miss Gammage. Are you all right?"

The girl looked at Raffigan who nodded stern instruction.

"I'm quite all right," she said "I'm lying down."

Pat grinned at that.

Cummings was silent a moment, then said: "Someone was trying to call the police from this apartment,

Miss Gammage. Are you certain you're alone?"

Marjorie replied. "I just came in." Raffigan waited tensely. There was something here—something bigger even than the murder he had discovered...

Extortion, with acid, slugs and pistols as weapons. With a man like the mysterious Klarsen who vanished from a leading hotel without a trace...

Marjorie who must be hooked up in this with Cummings somehow, but who is more afraid of the silky little man than she is of me, a stranger.

Pat knew Cummings wanted to get into this room, but was stymied for the moment. Whatever his game, the hotel manager wasn't ready to break in, wasn't prepared to sacrifice the sedate repute of the Arbor Apartments.

"A young man was waiting for you, downstairs," Cummings persisted. "Did you see him?"

Raffigan fixed a warning scowl on Marjorie.

"No," said the girl. "He must have gone before I came in."

"I let him have a dollar and eighty cents," Cummings declared. "You may repay me when—"

He left the words hanging, still seeking an invitation into the apartment.

"Just add it to my account," Marjorie said.

It was quiet beyond the door, but Raffigan knew Cummings was still standing there.

Then came noises from across the room and Pat looked up. Coming through the window from the fire escape were Tond and his fellow goon, guns in their hands.

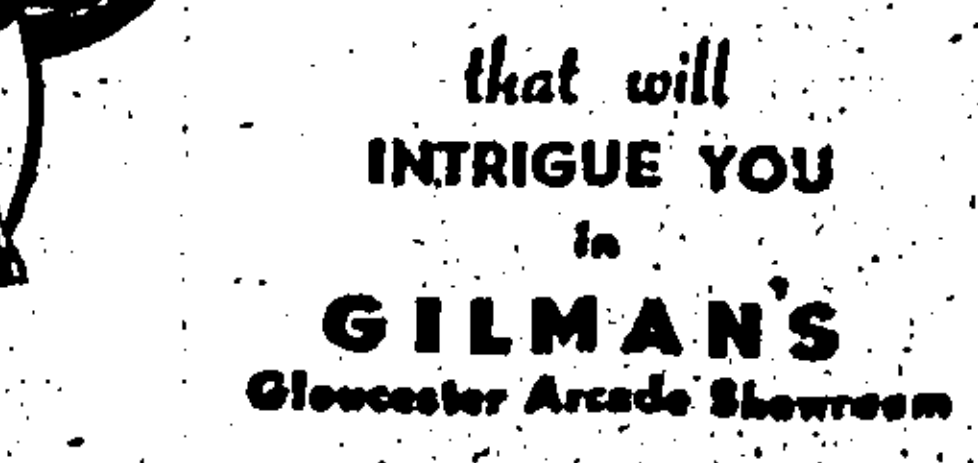

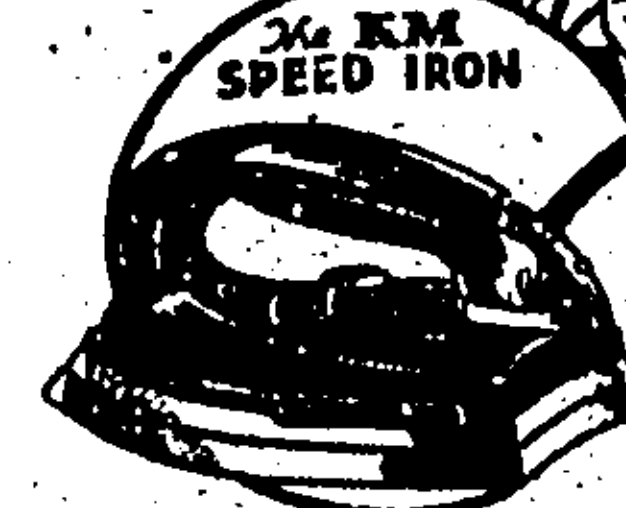

Were these men killers, sent around by Cummings, while he stalled in the hallway?

High Blood Pressure Dangerous to Heart

Thousands of men and women part to face the dangers of heart trouble and paralysis because of High Blood Pressure. High Blood Pressure is a mysterious disease that causes more deaths than cancer, largely because people mistake the symptoms for indigestion or some simple trouble. Common symptoms are: Pressure in the head, headaches at top and back of head and above eyes, dizziness, heart pains, drowsiness, loss of memory and energy. If you suffer any of these symptoms, do not delay a single day, for your life may be in danger. Start treatment at once with HYPON, which reduces High Blood Pressure with the first dose, takes a heavy load off the heart, and makes you feel years younger in a few days. Get HYPON from your chemist today. It is guaranteed to make you feel at ease strong or better back.

A LIBRARY OF RECORDS

As some people collect books, stamps, coins (and match-box tops, in some cases, so I have heard!) there is the ardent gramophile who collects records. The real enthusiast in this connection becomes—once the "bug" has bitten him—a hardened convert to the game. I suppose too, it must be admitted, that the gramophile is in danger of becoming a bore, except, of course, to another gramophile. Traditionally, an enthusiast becomes a little overpowering when he rides his hobby-horse, so that the gramophile can no more be brought to blame on this score than any other person.

Personally, I became a "convert," so to speak, about 15 years ago and the first fine flush of enthusiasm is as strong today as ever it was. I suppose a love of good music is a primary essential in this respect, because this is the cornerstone on which a record-library is built up.

To advise (or even to suggest) a basis on which to build up such a library is not for me. Apart from presumptuousness (which it would be obviously!), there is the old adage of "chacun a son gout" to be remembered. One man's meat is ever another's poison, so to suggest specifically that such-and-such a record is a "sine qua non" is inadvisable. There are, however, certain general considerations which can be suggested as essential to the basis of collection of a representative library of recorded music.

Firstly, symphonic works undoubtedly call out for representation. As if to acknowledge this fact, the catalogues are replete with recordings of all the standard symphonies. Lesser known works are not neglected by any means, and the man and woman whose tastes lie mainly in symphonic writings will find but little to quibble with in the varieties available for his or her consideration. Not only is it possible to find Beethoven's No. 1 Symphony (say) recorded twice in the H.M.V. catalogue, but Decca, Columbia or Brunswick may also have it in their issues as well. It is thus possible to have a choice of five or six different recordings, sufficiently wide a field, I suggest, to please the most exacting demands.

Secondly, one or more concertos call for inclusion if variety is to be the spice of the library. Of the pianoforte concertos, the classics, in every sense of the word, must surely include Beethoven's "Emperor" and the Tchaikovsky No. 1 in B flat. The more venturesome may even care to essay the Rachmaninov No. 2. This concerto has been heard over the air quite recently and many of its passages are certainly very beautiful. A concerto, although a little different to the usually accepted form, is a concerto by Bach, for the harpsichord. I bought this recording a few weeks ago, and so charming is it, that I have played it over and over again. Wanda Landowska is the soloist, a superb artist whose forte is devoted exclusively to the harpsichord. There is an old-worth charm about this instrument which is utterly delightful. For quiet soothing music, I can thoroughly recommend this record, which I confidently predict will be a firm favourite.

Of different calibre but equally as enchanting is the Handel Oboe Concerto, played by that greatest of oboists, Leon Goossens, with the Liverpool Philharmonic Orchestra conducted by Sir Malcolm Sargent. This music incidentally is used to fade-in "Thursday Serenade", a half-hour of continuous music, delightfully arranged and presented each Thursday evening by Betty Drown from Radio Hong Kong.

Of purely orchestral music, there is such a wide choice of tone-poems, suites, overtures, selections and fantasies, it is difficult to show where to begin. I think, however, no library can be truly regarded as complete unless it includes at least: Mozart's "Marriage of Figaro" overture

Variety Fare

Contributed By "MUSSETTA"

Handel's "Royal Fireworks" suite Sibelius' Tone-Poem "Finlandia"
"Les Sylphides" suite of Chopin
"Walk to Paradise Garden" Dellore
Prelude to Act III "La Traviata" Verdi

I know only too well how poor on attempt these suggestions comprise, bearing in mind the vast field of music to be represented in this category. Each will have his or her own opinion, but the main common attribute possessed by each of the examples I have quoted is that they are eternally young in themselves of their particular type, and form, I humbly suggest, a sure foundation on which to erect a library of recorded music.

Of vocal and operatic music, I have no space to write this week, nor of the odd "collector's curios" which are present in the catalogues for those who choose to look. Of these and such others, more anon.

It seems the Sunday evening symphony Concert continues to provide the main story of the evening music from Radio Hong Kong. Certainly, the programme selected for tonight's Concert conceals nothing to hackneyed tastes. It comprises:—

No. 3 Pianoforte Concerto... Beethoven
Partiti in E... J. S. Bach
No. 3 Symphony in A... Mendelssohn
Of the Bach work, it is enough to say it is an arrangement by the late Sir Henry Wood. Sir Henry's orchestration of the tremendous Toccata and Fugue in D Minor—for many years he concealed his work under the name of Klenowski—is known to many a Promenade-goer. In fact, in so far as it can be deemed to be necessary at all, Sir Henry popularised Bach to the eternal memory of himself. Tuesday night was Bach and Handel night usually at the old Queen's Hall, now, alas, laid low by the deprivations of the raiding Hun. As the familiar stocky figure, with real-carnation in his button-hole, mounted the rostrum, a roar of spontaneous applause would burst out from the waiting audience. This was no mere sycophantic empty applause born of a sense of duty or convention. It was genuine affectionate applause, indicative of the appreciation bestowed on the man.

Beethoven's No. 3 is probably second only in popularity to the "Emperor" Concerto. If anything, it is possibly less majestic than the "Emperor" although as compensation, it undoubtedly gains in the delicacy of its structure, particularly in the first movement. Bonavia, in his analysis of the five pianoforte concertos, asserts that "the third marks a long step to greater intensity of expression. No first movement written before it speaks in such bold, imperious tones, no adagio commands such a vast range of delicate, thoughtful, lyrical phrases. The final rondo has many points of special interest, not least amongst them being the very happy change of a theme originally heard in the minor key in 2/4 time into a 6/8 time in the major key, with all its sting and strenuousness turned to gentleness and good humour." Mendelssohn's so-called "Scottish" symphony bespeaks the gentle-lyricist which is evidenced so plainly in all Mendelssohn's music. By omitting the use of trombones, it is possible that the vitality of his music in the allegro is a little impaired, but this is more than compensated by the exquisite tenderness of the adagio.

MONDAY

At 8.30 p.m. there is a programme of popular orchestral favourites, comprising:—
"Ruy Blas" Overture... Mendelssohn

No. 1 Hungarian Dance... Brahms
"Finlandia" Tone Poem... Sibelius
"Coppelia" Music... Delibes
Marche Herolque... Saint Saens
Within the short space of 30 minutes, it would probably be difficult to comprise a more popular programme. The Saint-Saens piece is worth hearing, since it seldom seems to be heard nowadays.

Concerto Hour at 9.10 p.m. is devoted to a performance of Liszt's No. 2 Pianoforte Concerto. Although at times Liszt could express his feelings well enough in music, the show-man which unfortunately pervaded his artistic capabilities more often than not scamped his compositions. The result is that much of his music is meretricious and shallow, leaving but little effect save a memory of pyrotechnical skill at the piano key-board.

At 9.30 p.m. James Mason and Pamela Keillor are to be heard in a radio version of the film (featuring, I seem to recall, Fredrick March) "Death Takes a Holiday". An unusual story is concerned with what happens when Death forsakes his reaping for a holiday in the guise of an ordinary mortal.

TUESDAY

At 8.30 p.m. there is a programme devoted to Russian Music, when the great Chaliapin is to be heard. Although in his later recordings I feel the first signs of wear and a certain "roughness" are to be detected in his voice, Chaliapin generally turned out some marvellous recordings for H.M.V. The programme includes:—

Easter Festival Overture

—Rimsky-Korsakov

"The Creed" —Archangel'ski

Polonaise from Act III of

"Eugene Onegin".

Cossack Dance "Mazepa" Tchaikovsky

Song of the Volga Boatmen.

Chaliapin, of course, sings the "Creed" and the "Song of the Volga Boatmen". This music should make a highly intriguing feature, if only again to hear the late Chaliapin.

SATURDAY

At 9.10 p.m. Verdi's "Rigoletto" is to be given, a welcome follow-on to the recent broadcasts of "Aida", "La Traviata" and "Il Trovatore". In this quartette of operatic works, there can be found such a wealth of music as could not be equalled, I submit, by any other composer. Puccini probably comes nearest to equalling Verdi in this respect, but even he, I feel, does not maintain such a high standard as Verdi so consistently achieved.

The essence of Verdi lies in his ready appreciation of the dramatic. The finale of Act III of "Rigoletto" is a case in point. Gilda dies in the father's (her father) arms. The last few bars of this duet, given over to the baritone and his phrases—supported by ominous chords from the orchestra—to my mind, supply a dramatic moment in music such as is quite unequalled. The passionate intensity of this scene, with its foreboding threat of evil yet to come, rings down the curtain on a scene as dramatic and gripping as any I know.

AT MY TYPEWRITER...

Beginning this week we are starting another serial, and I do hope you all are going to like it.

Yes, the holidays are over, and I am glad to hear that you are working hard again.

Thank you for sending in the interesting contributions. I naturally understand why you boys and girls cannot send in the usual lot of articles during the next two months, your examinations will be on very soon. I will, however, be looking forward to see that nice pile of mail coming in from you all during the summer vacations.

Happy days to you all, from

CHILDREN'S DAY

The children's day is celebrated on April 4, every year. The children enjoy this feast immensely because it is meant for children. We must not only think of enjoying ourselves but must also know that we are the masters of the future world.

All children are like newly planted trees, we are young, enthusiastic, and we must all be planted well so that we might be strong enough to support ourselves for the future.

The world is going on, there are a great lot of inventions now, and they are invented by men; but we must realise that we are also in this world, we need to be great people, and we ought to invent much more things than people of 1949.

After all children are very important, because the future world depends on us. We must think of a way of setting peace to all countries. So that in the future we may live in peace, and so may our next and next, next generation. Thus, we may be proud of ourselves. For then we may boast and say, "This is our world, we have built during our childhood days." But in order to be honoured by our

BUZ SAWYER

LIFE AS TO A HAWKER

James was not sleeping. For with his mind fully crowded with all sorts of worries, he could not help recalling what he had done during the day, as he lay in his bed with his eyes wide open in the tranquility of the night.

This morning, as usual, he went out with his box of clothes in high spirits. But in the evening his children saw their father come home with a long face, though he tried to force a smile when they greeted him. He was terribly sad and depressed.

All the day long, he stood beside his box of clothes, by the side of the street, and shouted continuously at the pedestrians, telling them how good his goods were and how low was the price. But they passed him by as if they were deaf and would not even glance at him.

But James was not to be easily put off. He did not despair. He remained standing there sitting down on the street occasionally when he was tired and shouting at all times. Half the day had gone and yet his goods remained untouched.

Once, while shouting, James saw a coolie standing nearby munching his bun. This reminded him that he hadn't had his lunch. How hungry he was!

Soon the sun was down and here and there lamps were lit but still he had not sold anything.

Well, even if he did want to stay longer he could not. He had to go home, otherwise his family might think that he had been caught by the police.

"Tong," the clock struck one and still James was awake, still he was thinking. But now it was not on what he had done on the day. For unknown to himself, his thought had travelled from his work to the miserable puzzle of life. He was wondering why life was such a funny thing that could never be thoroughly understood and explained. For although "life" is a very simple word yet there is not a single man who knows what it really means.

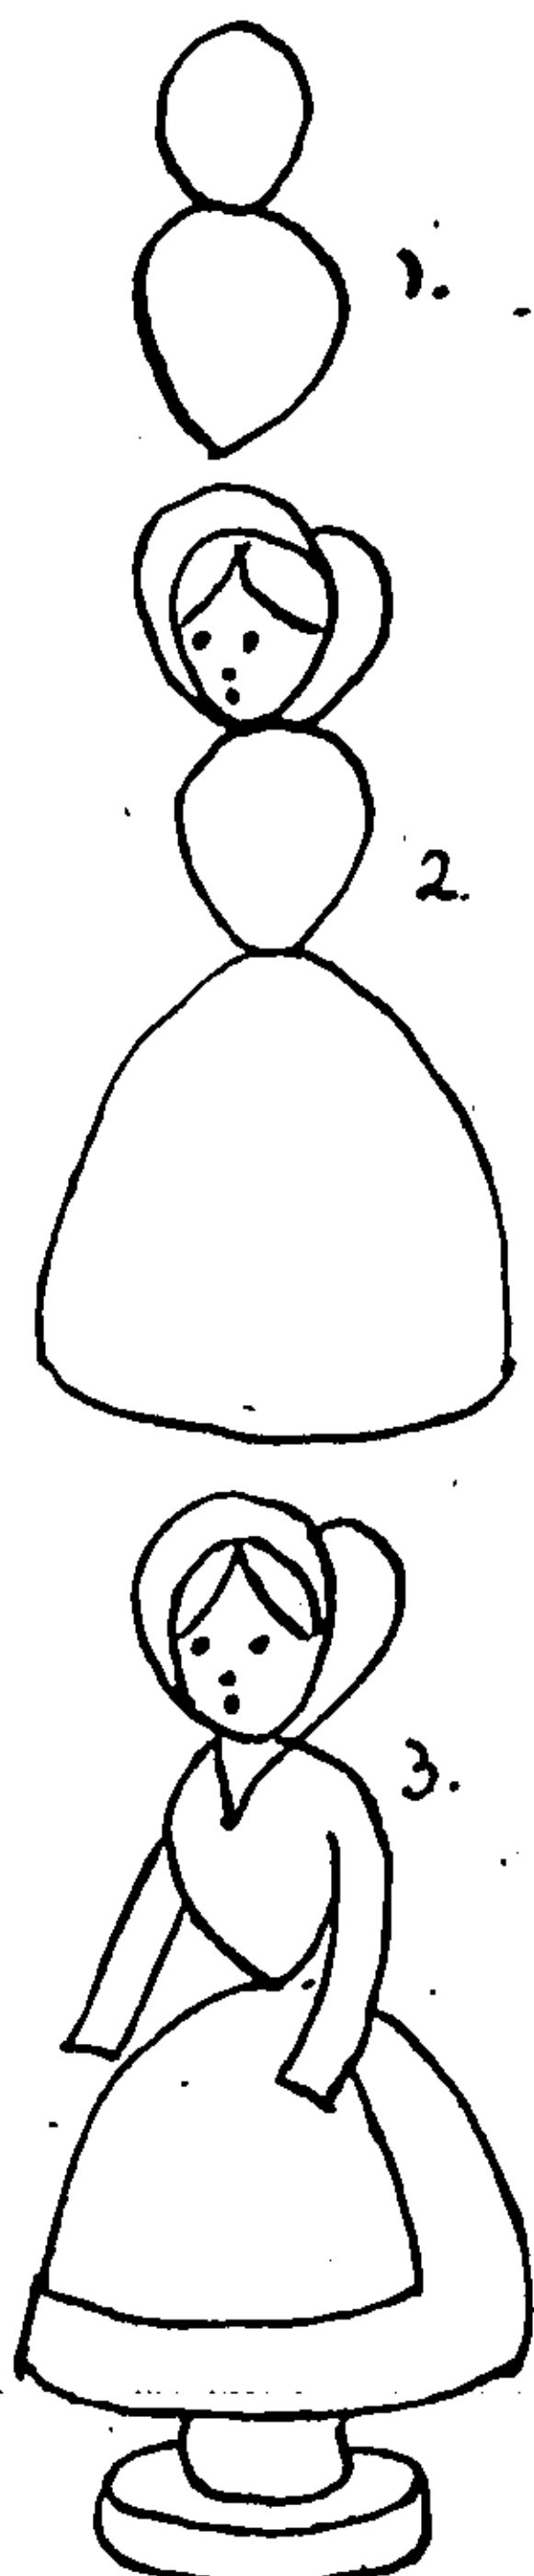

In spite of the fact that everybody was asleep, James thought that he heard somebody inside his dirty hut speaking to him aloud. But in reality, it was not somebody. It was his own thought that was speaking and telling him, aloud in his heart, this:

Everyone leads a life and though every life is not the same there is not one, strictly speaking, who has ever led a real happy life. No matter whether you are rich or poor, intelligent or stupid, it is all the same. In every life there are always some sort of sorrow. Do not worry James, and do not despair. Just try your best in your work and help others whenever you can and everything shall be alright and happiness shall show itself to you. For this is true with everybody. Unless one tries one's best to fulfill the duty in one's state of life and help others whenever possible, one shall never find happiness. And it is because no one can be like this, so far, that we say that there is not a single person who has ever had a real happy life.

Soon the clock struck twice and again James was still awake. He wanted to sleep but in vain. He could now no longer control himself for he had gone too far in his thought of life though even if he were to continue thinking till he died he would never be able to solve this miserable puzzle of human being.

Saturday Night

At every Saturday night,
When all the lights are bright,
We revel in the story books.
Sitting in the quiet nooks
With ourselves carried away,
Where troubles have no away.

Oh! what a lovely child is this!
Who is he, why a Bunny is his?
Alas! such a cruel slave master!
Good! here comes the rescuer!
And so we venture boldly
To story land we amuse greatly.

"Oh, dear! its half past eleven!"
With a start the peace is broken.
"Hurry!" says Annie, "to bed we go.
Or Daddy will find us; Ned, do so!"
Slowly and painfully we close Our books and to bed we go on tip toes.

HIPPO PETE IS TOO TIRED TO LIE DOWN

Children's world spotlight
The case of the hippopotamus that won't lie down is fascinating authorities at the New York Zoological Park.

The hippo is Pete, aged 45, the oldest in captivity, and he is now so old that he hates to lie down because of the trouble involved in getting up. Instead, he has been in the habit of going down the steps from his pen to the pool and sleeping while he floats gently in the water.

Recently Zoo officials have been worried at the condition of the steps leading to the pool. The ponderous weight of Pete's 322 stones over the long years has worn them away and made them tricky for the old boy to navigate.

Occasionally he has slipped on the way down and has hit the water with a splash unbecoming to his dignified old age. Zoo officials, fearing he might break a leg, decided to remake the steps and had the pool drained for the workmen.

Taking life as it comes, Pete has stayed placidly in his pen and gone to sleep--standing up. At the moment of writing, he has been standing for three days and nights and, as the workmen have another week to work on the steps before they can fill the pool again, everyone is wondering if he will stand up the whole time.

As a zoo official said, "To get his pool back to him as quickly as we can is the least we can do for him. Pete is the politest, gentlest old thing in the whole zoo, but we can see that he will be pleased when we all go away."

The Story Of A Nasty Man

Not far from a pretty village, there was a mansion. In it lived a nasty old miser. His name was Horatio. He was very unpopular with the villagers, as he was so mean.

One day, a hungry beggar came by and passed his mansion. Feeling very hungry and tired, he knocked at the door hoping to get some help. The old man came to the door and the beggar said, "Sir, will you please give me some food to eat? I'm so hungry that I'm ready to faint any moment." The old man was not a bit moved, but shouted angrily, "Ha, you dirty thing, how dare you ask me. Go away quickly, otherwise I'll call the police." The poor beggar got so frightened that he ran away as fast as he could.

That night when Horatio went to sleep he had a very curious dream. He dreamt that he wandered into heaven and there he met an angel who led him to many beautiful places where he saw that everybody looked happy. Then he was led to another place where he saw everyone suffering. Some of them were chained up even. When he saw this he was very surprised, and asked the angel why.

The angel then told him that all those men were unkind to people when they were on earth. Horatio was very frightened and woke up suddenly. From then on, he made up his mind to be a good man. He donated all his money to charities and he helped everybody who was in difficulties. He was loved by everyone and he is very happy now.

This lesson teaches us that you can only be happy when you are kind and good to others.

YOUR DREAMS & WHAT THEY MEAN

I.
ICE—This is always an unfortunate dream; expect many difficulties.
ILLNESS—A warning of some great temptation that will not work out favourably for you, however promising it appears at first.
INCOME TAX—Financial losses, probably through assisting a friend.
INK—If you spill ink in your dream, expect separation from friends. But to be writing, and using ink, is a good sign.
INSANITY—A dream of the contrary—your plans will prove successful.
IRONING—A change for the better. Keep yourself free from ties and responsibilities for a time. Help will come to you in an unexpected way.

The Dancing Kettle

Once upon a time, there lived a poor old man. His name was John. He had a tea-kettle and John did not know it was a fairy kettle.
Every night, when the old man had fallen asleep, it would change into an animal, and dance up and down on a rope.
One night, the old man was very sad for he had no more money, so he could not sleep. That's why sat in front of the fire with his eyes shut, thinking. As he was resting there, he heard a little noise, and opening one eye, he saw his kettle dancing. Then the kettle danced up to him and said: "Why don't you take me into the market-place and show me to the people? I am sure many people would give money to see a tea-kettle with legs dancing on a rope. Then you would soon be rich."
The old man agreed to do this and not so very long after he became a rich man and he and the kettle lived happy everafter.

The Story Of An Old Broom

How pretty and clean I looked when I was laid against the door in a shop for sale! One day a lady came into the shop and looked at the other brooms, but as soon as she saw me, she took me.
I went to this lady's house and stayed there most of my life. Every morning the servant cleaned the floor with me. I stayed and worked for a few months; but when I was old and a little broken, they kept me for two more weeks using me only to beat the carpets and sweep the dirty grounds. They did not know how it did hurt me when I found myself so ill-treated.
At last they gave me to a poor man and took me to a little hut.
I do not like to live in this hut, but I have no other choice. I'm going to last only a few more weeks more, and then I shall have to be thrown away because I shall be of no use. Most probably I shall be thrown into the dust bin among other rubbish which they throw into the deep sea. I shiver to think of it, but I am ready to die since I have done my duty.

Bakery Magic

Of all the pleasant stores I know (But maybe you can guess) I like the shops at bakery shops—
To that I must confess. Of cinnamon and other spice I catch a teasing whiff; I stand right there and stare and stare.
Until I wonder if—
I wonder if those cookie stars will really shine at night. And if they do, I wonder, too, how far they throw their light.
I wonder if the pound cake weighs Exactly as it ought—
And who will pay for it today, Or if it will be bought.
I wonder if the gingerbread's The one who ran away.
But then I think from his shy wink
That this one's glad and gay. He beckons and I step inside As quickly as I can; I have a crust, and it was meant To buy the gingerbread!

Children of the Jungle

By H. M. McKay

With the faithful half-breed Jose, in whose veins ran the mixed blood of Spaniard and South American Indian, the boy and girl moved down to the river from the adobe hut, where their father lay.

"You have been more than guide and servant to us, Jose, in the time we have lived up-country here in the forests," Tom Brandon said in his halting Spanish. "During these last anxious days, while we have watched our father steadily growing worse, you have helped us to nurse him with a devotion we can never forget."

"And we know that while we are gone you will be constantly at his side," he added, "watching over him till we fetch the doctor from the settlement of Marañon."

"Even so," the swarthy South American rejoined earnestly, "I shall tend Senor Brandon ceaselessly, never fear."

The girl spoke. Her voice was tremulous. "You ... you don't think I should remain ... to help you look after my father, Jose?" she faltered.

"No, Senorita Helen," was the answer. "The two of you will travel faster in the canoe than one alone."

"As for me, I am well fitted to care for Senor Brandon because I have experience of this fever that has struck him down. Nevertheless he needs a doctor, and the medicines a doctor will bring—and he needs these things quickly."

There was a "dug-out" moored to the river bank. Already Jose had provided this crude boat with stores—provisions for a lengthy journey, ammunition and rifle in case of emergencies. The children entered the canoe and a moment later were plying the two paddles with which it was equipped, while Jose raised one arm in farewell and called to them in his sonorous voice: "Speedy journey, amigos!"

It was no season for travel in that country, for the time of the rains was at hand, and by nightfall lowering clouds that had gathered in the sky were disgorging a tropical downpour over the great forests and the swift-flowing river that wound tortuously between them.

Soaked by that drizzling deluge, Tom and Helen scanned the river-banks the more eagerly for some likely spot where they might rest for the night.

It was not easy to find such a spot, for thick jungle choked the ground between the close-knit trees—masses of undergrowth and festoons of creepers that were impenetrable to man.

At last, however, boy and girl sighted a little clearing, where the bank shelved steeply to the foot of a low bluff honeycombed with caves and burrows.

"That looks a good place, Helen," Tom said. "We'll shelter overnight in the biggest of those caves there, and make an early start in the morning."

They steered towards the clearing, and scrambled ashore. "We'd better get our stores under cover," Tom declared. "You take some of them, Helen. I'll tie up the canoe and bring the rest of the stuff with me."

The girl assented, and, gathering such of the provisions as she could carry, made for the cave Tom had indicated.

A Fisherman's Light

I see a light,
Far on the darkening sea,
And through the telescope I can see—
The light coming nearer to me.

It is a fisherman,
Fishing for his daily bread,
Sometimes I wonder,
Does he ever go to bed?

And if I look closely,
I can see the mother moving round,
Moving very quietly,
For the children are sleeping sound.

But now I turn away,
For I must go to bed,
Ah! it's good after play
To rest your sleepy head.

HENRY ESMOND
The History of Henry Esmond, which many critics from Trollope to Saintsbury have pronounced the greatest of English novels, has been adapted for radio by John Keir Cross and is to be broadcast as a serial in 12 instalments beginning this week in the General Overseas Service. Thackeray's novel is historical fiction at its best. The great Victorian novelist could paint the most wonderfully vivid and authentic picture of a past age, and the age he chose as the background for 'Esmond' was one in which he was specially interested, the reign of Queen Anne—the stately age of powder and lace, of Steele, Swift, and Addison, set against the exciting story of a Jacobite conspiracy. The drama reaches its climax with the death of Queen Anne, the failure of the hopes of restoring the Stuarts to the vacant throne, the proclamation of the Hanoverian George as King—and the disillusioned retreat of Esmond to an estate 'on the beautiful banks of the Potomac.'

Dr. Gordon N. Ray, the American scholar who has added greatly to our knowledge of Thackeray through his monumental edition of the letters and private papers, and is now doing research in London for a new biography of Thackeray, has found a link between the story of 'Henry Esmond' and Thackeray's own unhappy private life. Lady Ritchie, the novelist's daughter, described 'Esmond' as autobiographical beyond any other of her father's works, and Thackeray himself remarked of this novel 'it is the unwritten part of books that would be the most interesting.' He also said of it to an American friend 'Here is the very best I can do I stand by this book and am willing to leave it, when I go, as my card.'

General Overseas: Monday, 5.00 p.m. G.K. CHESTERTON—TWO VIEWS. In a broadcast which the BBC's General Overseas Service takes from the Third Programme, Colm Brogan and Raymond Postgate contribute two statements on the value and quality of G.K. Chesterton's work. Raymond Postgate speaks of Chesterton as a revolutionary writer. Brogan speaks of him as a moralist and also as a man of strange vision.

Both speakers will illustrate their points by quotations, and some of Chesterton's poems will be read by Laelmae Brown.

General Overseas: Friday, 8.30 p.m. SPORT

NEW SAFETY DOOR

An inventor in Denmark has perfected a ship's "Safety Door" that may soon be saving hundreds of lives at sea.

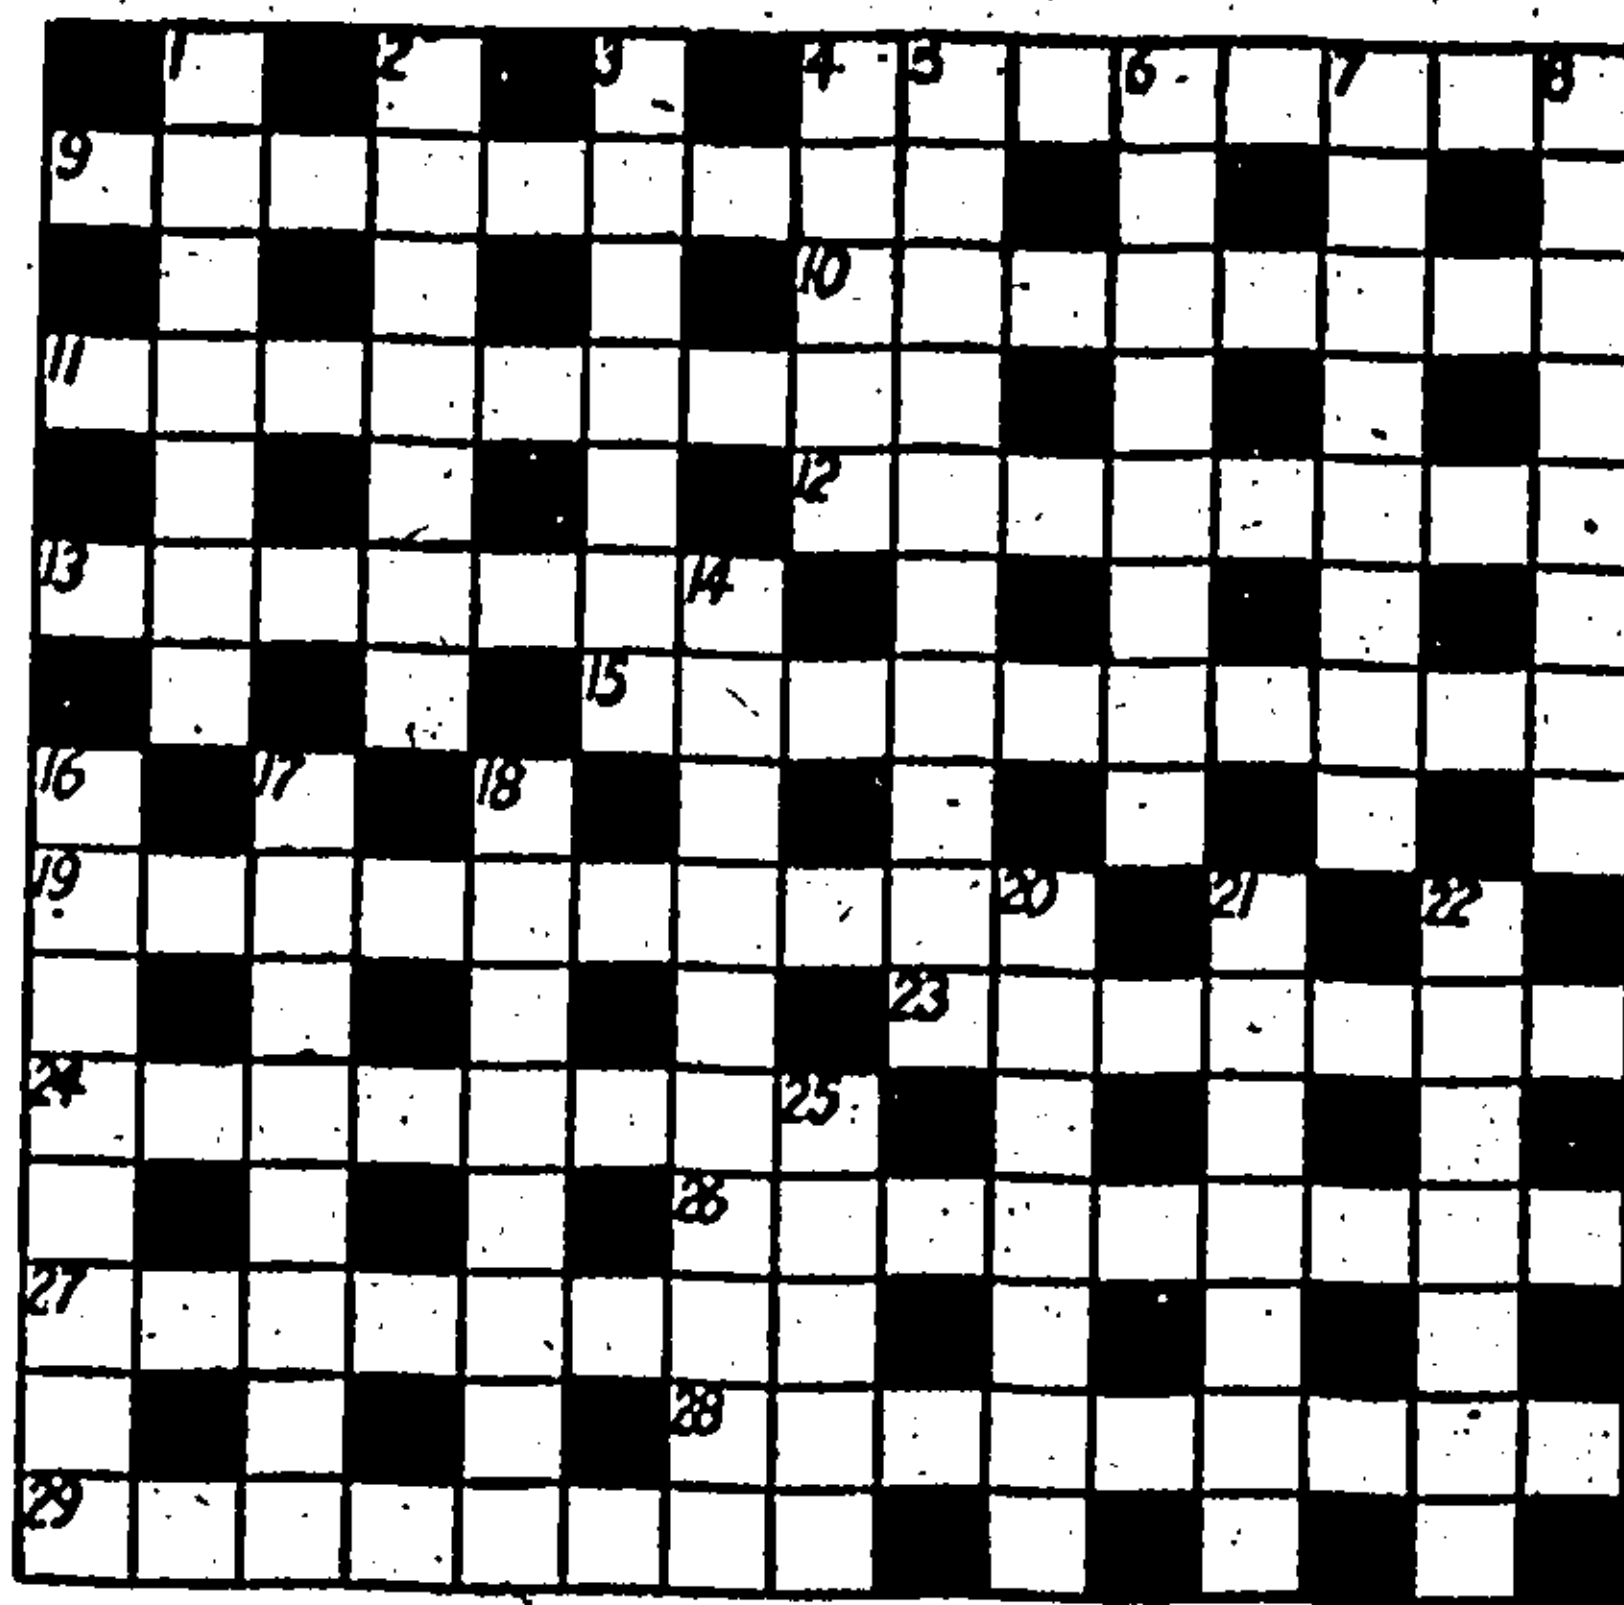

During and since the war, many lives have been lost ships have sunk and passengers and crew have been trapped in their cabins. A recent typical disaster was that of the Danish steamer "Kjobenhavn" which hit a mine and sank with the loss of 50 lives off the coast of Jutland. Passengers, it was discovered, were trapped in their cabins because doors were jammed.

To prevent such tragedies in future, the Danish inventor has produced the "Safety Door." In the event of an explosion or collision, the door opens automatically as soon as there is any distortion of the outer frame, or any additional pressure such as air or water pressure, on the door itself.

Now the "Safety Door" has been tested and approved by the Danish Ministry of Shipping and is to be fitted to both old and new Danish ships.

Lane Norcott

Auntie Tumble's worry corner

I am a beautiful woman, aged 39, with lustrous blue eyes, and a perfect figure, and all my friends agree that I am very talented as well.

They say I am a splendid conversationalist, a first-class cook, a magnificent housekeeper, a devoted wife, and an outstandingly good mixer.

In addition, I am an accomplished singer and pianist; a good all-round sportswoman (although handy with needle); very well read, and possessing a keen appreciation of beauty; a graceful dancer; an ardent dog lover; and, according to my friends, a witty and talented mimic into the bargain. Certainly my impersonations of Greta Garbo and Myrna Loy seem to make me the life and soul of every party.

For the first few months of my married life I was divinely happy, but nowadays my husband seems to prefer the company of other women. What on earth can the matter be?—PUZZLED GLADYS.

THEY STOP YOU FROM MARRYING

New York, April 30.

A group of New York psychologists is running a thriving lonely hearts club which preaches against marriage. Most such organisations make a money-back guarantee that they will find you a mate, but not this one.

Alleged Spies Were In Love

Washington, April 29. Miss Judith Coplon, former Justice Department employee, aged 27, who is being tried for espionage, shared mutual affection with Russian Valentin A. Gubitchev, Miss Coplon's lawyer told a Court here.

Yet he had never even touched her, and out of respect for her told her he was a married man, he added.

Miss Coplon and Gubitchev were arrested by Federal agents in New York on March 4. Gubitchev has been released on $100,000 bail.

Miss Coplon's lawyer told the jury: "When he met her, Gubitchev told her he worked as an engineer with the United Nations. He was personable and spoke as a man to a maid."

"She developed an affection for him and he apparently for her."

"He told her for the first time that he was a married man but not on good terms with his wife and that he wanted to become part of this great country which he admired."

"When you are in love then love knows no bounds," her lawyer said.

On March 4, the day she was arrested, she was still trying to find out if she should follow her head or her heart, he said.

Her lawyer contended that the Federal Bureau of Investigation never saw Miss Coplon pass any papers on to Gubitchev.

Government claims that Miss Coplon gave him secret Government information.—Reuter.

War Words Are Now Official

Massachusetts, April 29.

Some 15,000 words, many of them war-born, were given official recognition today as the Marriam Company published the latest edition of "Webster's New Collegiate Dictionary."

Mr. Churchill's "iron curtain" is included as are other now familiar words such as "Communism," "zero zero" and "party line."

In the field of transportation accommodations, railroads contribute "roomette" as the tourist trade pops up with "motel" as a refinement of over-night cabins.

The slang of teen-age girls is given scant recognition, but the word "wolf" is given a fourth meaning as applied to an overly romantic male who shows his appreciation of the opposite sex by animal-like howls.—United Press.

The founding fathers believe that anyone who joins a lonely hearts club is a pretty miserable person and not suited for matrimony. Their aim is to make people so happy they will not care whether they find a mate or not.

It is all right, of course, if a person elopes, but not until the cultural research centre has filled him with gurgles of joy 24 hours a day.

Leonard Wadler, bachelor and administrative head of the centre, explains that the organisation tries to get people before they need to see a psychiatrist.

Many people become neurotic because they think their unhappiness is the result of not being married, he said. Actually they would make terrible mates because they would just be neurotic together, without a syllable of interesting breakfast table chatter to offer.

"A major flaw in our social life is that most people want to get married," he said. "That's just self-deceit. They will not be happy after marriage unless they were happy before."

The centre, therefore, tries to give people safety valves in the form of spare time activities which have no relation to everyday work and which would provide topics of conversation to those backsliders who run off and say "I do."

In the year and a half the research centre has been going, 1,000 lonely persons from 18 to 70 have joined. Sixty per cent are women.—United Press.

BRUNETTE WAS FBI AGENT

New York, April 29.

A slender brunette, who spent seven years as a Federal Bureau of Investigation agent in the Communist Party, testified here today that her party made a spirited effort last year to win members among New York's wharf labourers, lorry drivers and parcel delivery workers.

She, Miss Angela Calomiris, who gave evidence when 11 top American Communists faced trial on charges of having advocated a forcible overthrow of the United States Government.

Miss Calomiris said her own duties had consisted of handing out Communist literature to wharf labourers as they appeared for work every morning.

Describing the way the Communist Party wins recruits, she said: "You take them to a dinner or a show, or get them to talking in a cafeteria. Give them books to read. Get them to come to meetings, and so on." — Reuter.

UN APPROVES TIME-SAVING

Flushing Meadow, April 29.

The proposal of Denmark, Norway and Sweden, that a 15-member Special Committee be appointed to consider time-saving methods in debate was approved by the United Nations General Assembly today.

The voting was 48 in favour, none against, with the Soviet Union and the other Eastern European nations abstaining.—Reuter.

HARRIMAN APPEALS FOR U.S. ARMED AID

Washington, April 29.

Mr. Averell Harriman, United States Ambassador-at-large for the Marshall Plan, testified today before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee on the Atlantic Pact.

He said that in Western Europe today there is a growing wave of confidence instilled by the concept of the Pact that free men will stand together in the common defence of their liberty and freedom.

"Should we turn aside at this moment, I doubt whether we can ever again recapture that spirit."

Mr. Harriman said the will to resist tyranny, which was ebbing in Europe in 1947, is flowing again today. Without this revival, the Communists might well have succeeded in getting control of Italy, nor could they have been kept out of the Government of France.

Senator Arthur Watkins (Republican for Utah) asked Mr. Harriman if the shipments of war potential materials by Britain to Soviet Russia and Poland under trade agreements do not conflict with general policy.

Mr. Harriman said the ECA policy is that materials sent by the United States should not be used for the manufacture of war potential materials by the United States exports for security reasons.

"I believe the British are rigidly adhering to that," he declared.

Senator Watkins asked if it is in keeping with the spirit of the North Atlantic Pact for Britain to ship aluminium and other war potential, such as steel rails and locomotives, to Russia.

Must Have Arms

Mr. Harriman replied that many trade agreements between Eastern and Western Europe are on a barter basis and many views have been expressed on what war potential really is. Britain and the other ECA countries have the same general policy views on that as the United States, and are restricting certain imports.

"These countries recognise the same interests as we do and are taking measures to carry out parallel restrictions," he added.

Mr. Harriman said that Western Europe must be given American arms to bolster her own confidence and increase United States security.

Western Europe is growing more confident because of the Atlantic pact, he said. The Western European nations are prepared to contribute their share in self-help and mutual aid under the pact.

He added: "They cannot, however, develop an effective military establishment alone. They need military equipment and raw materials from us to supplement what they can do for themselves. Assistance from us is vital to the growth of mutual confidence. It will be concrete evidence that we have real concern for their problems of defence."

Fate In War

Referring to the fate of free nations in Europe in the event of war, Mr. Harriman said: "They recognise all too well that as things stand today they would be overrun, and when their countries were again liberated, the life of their people would be irreparably destroyed."

Mr. Harriman said: "From the United States standpoint, our security can be immeasurably increased as time goes on and as the military forces of the Western

DEFENCE OF NETHERLANDS

The Hague, April 29.

Holland plans to abolish its Ministries of War and Navy, and combine their functions under one Ministry of National Defence, a memorandum to the First Chamber of the States General disclosed today.

The memorandum, prepared by the Defence Minister, Jonkhoe W. F. Schokking, said this move would increase efficiency and would make co-ordination with the Brussels Treaty powers easier.

He said that he fully shares the anxiety expressed by many Members of Parliament that The Netherlands in spite of the continuing serious international situation, is practically defenceless in Europe.—Reuter.

Margaret Bathes In Mediterranean

Capri, April 29.

Princess Margaret today bathed in the Mediterranean for the first time.

Wearing a sky blue bathing suit and a wide brimmed straw hat, she was rowed out to a motor yacht put at her disposal by the Italian authorities.

She went aboard from a private beach and sailed off round the island to find another private place to bathe.

The Princess, who was with Major and Lady Mars Harvey, embarked from the beach below the picturesque villa named Torre Saracena which has been lent to her during her stay by 80-year-old half-English, half-Italian Edwin Corio, writer and engineer.

She went down to the beach from the hotel in a summy pink and blue cotton frock and changed into a bathing suit at the villa before going out to the yacht.

Today's excursion was the first bit of real privacy the Princess has had since her arrival in Italy on Wednesday.

Up to now she has been followed by photographers and journalists whenever she appeared in public.

Today, at Major Harvey's request, the 30 British, American

DUTCH ENVOYS HONOURED

The Hague, April 29.

Dutch diplomats in Washington and Ottawa were among a long list of recipients of hundreds of decorations announced today in commemoration of Queen Juliana's 40th birthday tomorrow.

The list includes the Grand Cross of the Order of Orange-Nassau to Dr. Eelco Van Kleffens, Dutch Ambassador in Washington. Dr. Jan Herman Van Royen, Dutch Ambassador in Ottawa, who was the spokesman in the Indonesian debates in the Security Council, becomes a Commander in the Order of The Netherlands Lion.—Reuter.

Blonde Girl Matador

Paris, April 29.

The management of the Paris Palais des Sports hope that a special police ruling will allow matadors to kill their bulls at bull-fights in the Palais on May 6 and 7. Under French law, bulls may only be wounded and must be slaughtered after the fight.

The chief attraction will be a girl matador, Genchita Giron, aged 24, blonde daughter of a Peruvian and an Irishwoman. She is to fight the bulls on foot and on horseback, armed only with a yard-long, metal-tipped wooden stick.—Reuter.

Mills Are Looted By Hooligans

Nairobi, April 29.

A number of Indian-owned cotton gins have been looted by hooligans in the Uganda Protectorate since the outbreak of the disturbances there on Sunday.

Two gins were seized by organised gangs and others were robbed of cash but there is no report of any casualties among the Indians themselves.

The arrival of reinforcements supported by armoured cars brought quiet to the Kampala area today.

The authorities said that more than 200 arrests have been made since Sunday, when the trouble broke out during a Nationalist demonstration against the continuance in power of 16 chiefs and three of the Kabaka's (King) Ministers. The Kabaka, in a statement to his people today, condemned the activities of the political parties which were proscribed yesterday—the Batuka Party and the African Farmers Union—referring to them as traitors who would be brought to book.

Small gangs of hooligans are reported to be still operating in the outlying areas, but are being steadily rounded up by reinforced patrols, including a large contingent of the King's African Rifles, which was transferred from Kenya.—Reuter.

Phone Call Spells Death In A Royal Home

The phone bell shrilled in the stately Belgrave mansion belonging to a king.

The housekeeper, Elizabeth McLindon, who sat at her desk by the window, made no move.

Her right hand lay on the scuffed pages of the London telephone directory for 1946, at page 2,021, which lists the Metropolitan police stations.

Her jewelled left hand was just touching the ringing telephone. But beautiful Elizabeth McLindon, chaperone to the aristocracy for 20 years, described as London's perfect housekeeper—could not answer it.

She was dead—shot through the neck.

The telephone went on ringing every two hours, all afternoon and evening, in the furnished but desolate mansion in that London square.

That sound, heard faintly by neighbours, and three days' supply of milk uncollected on the doorstep of the tradesmen's entrance, finally convinced local residents something was amiss.

They sent for the police.

The mansion belonged to the King of Greece. It was being furnished and decorated for his sister, Princess Catherine. A constable who answered the first inquiry went through the house, sniffing the smell of new paint and plaster, his boots sinking into lush carpets. The house seemed unoccupied.

One door was locked. The policeman put his eye to the keyhole. He saw a blue lizard-skin shoe and a silk-clad ankle—ominously still.

A bullet had killed Miss McLindon instantly.

Her body was still in the chair by the window when Superintendent Cherrill and I arrived.

Inspector Percy Law was standing his camera on its tripod, taking photographs. A jewel on the dead woman's hand sparkled at each bright detonation of his flash-bulbs.

It seemed obvious that Elizabeth McLindon had been trying to telephone the police. What, we wondered, had she been prevented from telling us?

There Was Blood On The Bullet

As I bent to examine the telephone, Superintendent Rawlings was supervising the careful removal of the plaster on the wall, of a .32 pistol bullet. The flattened, snuggled-up little lead pellet, no larger than a cigarette and, bare blood traces.

Then a young policewoman sat in the murdered woman's chair while an expert ran tapes from the bullet-hole in the wall to the victim's neck, to trace the direction from which the shot had been fired.

Whoever fired it knew why Miss McLindon had gone to the telephone, was willing to commit murder to stop that message getting through.

What kind of message? Surely nothing so simple as a burglar in the house, for a thief had only to hasten past the room and escape via garden or front door. And a thief would hardly have missed the mansion in that London square.

CID men went to see Mr. Boyce. He was an intense, untidy chap, living in a tiny rented room. "Artist" was one description he had applied to himself.

A "housepainter" was what we found him to be. That wasn't important. But in the police we find that tiny deceptions sometimes lead to big ones.

He spoke earnestly. "I was worried about Elizabeth. I had been phoning her every two hours, but got no reply. We were to be married shortly."

Next day the manager of a car firm in Buckingham Palace-road came to the police with a cheque for £20, signed "S. Papakindolou" and alleged to be chargeable to the Greek Royal Household. It was from the administrative cheque-book of Miss McLindon—and it was a forgery.

The man who had presented the cheque was thin-lipped, wearing spectacles, had long hair, Mr. Boyce again.

If Miss McLindon had discovered her fiancé had been stealing—and forging—cheques from her book, it might have been reason enough to phone the police. We had motive. Boyce was a detective.

A detective talked to his landlady. "Ah—that Mr. Boyce was a wild one!" she said. He kept a revolver in his bedroom. It frightened me, so I asked him to leave.

"You'll Not Get Me"

Confronted with this Boyce said: "Yes, but I shot it into the sea at Brighton. Ask my landlady's husband."

"That's right," said the landlady's husband. "I searched his room to make sure he'd disposed of the gun, and it was certainly not there."

But one of Boyce's workmates said: "I saw a gun in his pocket one day at work. Boyce said he had to carry it because his landlady was getting nosy, and her husband had searched his room."

In the remand cells at Gerald Road Police Station, Boyce was not worried.

"You'll not get me for murder," he said. "I'll admit forging the cheque, but the murder charge is ridiculous. The murder was done by a .32 bullet and my gun was a .45. Can you prove different?"

Scotland Yard answered by bringing in Mr. Robert Churchill—Brit's foremost ballistics expert, who knew more about guns, bullets and explosives than Mr. Boyce knew about house-painting.

He examined the bullet and the cartridge case found in the carpet.

"This shot was fired from the doorway of the room more than two feet from the victim," he said. "The gun that fired it was a Browning .32 calibre, with a faulty ejector."

The Clue Of The Faulty Ejector

The Murder Squad rummaged deeper into Boyce's past. He was traced to a lodging-house in Fulham, where he had shared a room with a demobilised soldier.

"Did you ever see Boyce with a gun?" the ex-soldier was asked. The man snorted. "Did I see him with a gun? Why, he stole mine!"

"What sort of gun?"

"A Browning .32 automatic pistol."

Wedding Date Was Set

It did not seem likely. Her background appeared flawlessly respectable. For nearly 20 years she had presided with austere competence over the homes of some of England's best families.

Work went on in the library through the long summer afternoon. A yellow cartridge case, calibre .32, was found in the pile of the carpet.

Then the phone rang. A detective working on the case had found that Elizabeth McLindon was to have been married privately within the next few days.

"Bridgroom," added the caller, "is described as Mr. Arthur Boyce, an artist—smallish, long hair, thin lips, horn-rimmed spectacles—lives in Brighton."

"Try the neighbours' servants," said Superintendent Rawlings to one of his men. "If there's romance in the background they'll know."

They did. A tight-lipped young man with untidy hair and horn-rimmed spectacles had, it seemed, been a frequent visitor to

Oh, I've had some close calls in my time!

A Queen And Mrs. Grady

TWO KEY WOMEN IN THE FIGHT AGAINST THE REDS

By JENNY NICHOLSON

Greece has two queens. She has her official, hard-working, popular young Queen Frederika, and she has Mrs. Henry Grady, wife of the American Ambassador, who has personally adopted the country and become its temporary, unpaid, uncrowned queen.

Queen Frederika is the partner in the most popular monarchy that Greece has ever had.

She is small, with a curly head and an absurd turned-up nose and a merriest smile that really she sometimes looks like a Greek shepherd boy than a pretty woman, a queen, or a mother of three children.

For Greece a serious, hard-working monarchy which has no executive power and no possibility of making a fortune out of the country is a far more suitable head of State than a three-year President who has had no experience of the job and plenty of scope for graft.

It is obvious that the reigning pair—especially the Queen—in trying to bring Balkan monarchy up to date are trying to make it a serious job and not just a medieval relic.

In a country actively at war with Communism, the position of monarchy—automatically identified by the Communists with reaction—is necessarily difficult. So they are both deliberately doing the job carefully.

The Queen, curled up in one corner of the sofa, talks of their job eagerly, economically—sometimes angrily, sometimes sadly. She was born a German princess, but has now completely identified herself with Greece and cares deeply what happens to it.

Aware that Greece is a country with little social conscience and a tradition of corruption and inefficiency in government, both the King and Queen use every straw of influence they have to see that their people are looked after and their morale kept in good shape.

The aim of the King and Queen is clearly to stabilise a non-political influence in a country where politics are a national sport. (The Queen laughed—and she sounded like good Venetian glass being flicked by a connoisseur's fingers. "Oh, yes—as you have cricket, we have politics.")

'Revitalised'

King Paul and Queen Frederika are woven warmly into the life of

The detective asked: "Was there anything wrong with the gun?"

Back came the answer: "It had a faulty ejector."

The ex-soldier rummaged through his possessions and found a used cartridge case from the gun lying in a drawer.

The detectives took it to Mr. Churchill. His face lit up.

"That's it!" he said, exultantly. "That'll do the trick!" He put it under his microscope.

"Fired by the same gun that killed Elizabeth McLindon," said Mr. Churchill. "No doubt of it."

At his trial Arthur Boyce listened quietly to the evidence. He stood up to hear the verdict of "Guilty." He nodded his head. "I had a fair trial," he said. "I'm sorry for Elizabeth's relatives."

Then the insignificant house-painter who had committed murder in a Royal house turned and walked down the stairway that led towards the condemned cell.

Greece. Mrs. Henry Grady is sort of superimposed on top of it.

Since Greece was the first outpost planted by America when she started crusading against Communism, and because Lucretia Grady represents America far more publicly and dynamically than anyone else, her importance really is considerable.

She is a richly dressed, grey little woman, with an energy that can only be described as animal, the determination characteristic of American women who "run things," and an enthusiasm which bowls everyone along regardless of their private determination not to be bowled along. Her smile flashes on and off like a neon sign. Effusion flies at you from her sparkling brown eyes.

Only six months ago she came to Greece, which was miserably fighting for its life. She found it unknown by the outside world—especially in America, who was supporting it. She found the morale low.

"The very day I arrived," she said breathlessly, "I saw there must be a coming-together of all thinking people—an amalgamation—a blending—you see my viewpoint?"

Need Revitalising

"The Greeks need revitalising, they need to forget their history. I'm not interested in their yesterday—only in their tomorrow. No, don't burn their history books—just put them in the barn. Oh, my!" she sighed dramatically. "I wish I were five times myself!" And those who are near to the first daily onslaughts of her personality reel back at the thought of it.

She hurled herself into the business of blending the Greek Ministers at Embassy luncheons, amalgamating herself to women's organisations. ("There are 77 of them and each and every one of them has made me its honorary chairman"), and she has revitalised, revitalised the Greeks with her best achievement so far—the "Work and Victory Week" (known throughout Greece and the islands as "Mrs. Grady Week").

It was held during the week which ended in Independence Day, the Greek national holiday, simultaneously with a "Greek Week" in the United States.

Each day was dedicated to a phase of Greek life—the Church, Agriculture, Industry, Labour, Youth, and War. It was a huge success. Every day the towns and villages and hamlets on the right side of the fighting lines were loud with bands of reverberated Greeks, and gay with the blue and white flags of revitalised Greece.

In Athens Mrs. Grady organised the floodlighting of the Acropolis and a huge neon sign reading "Work and Victory" on Lycabettus—the toothlike mountain that protrudes from the middle of the city.

Mrs. Grady sent a message to part of the American Fleet which after a visit to Greece had sailed on, asking them to return. "We would just so love the boys to be there."

And they returned and American marines marched in the Independence Day Parade. President Truman sent a message to the Greek people. Mrs. Grady sent 20 Greek Exiles in their national ballot-dress costume on a tour of the United States. This was all excellent for American consumption—and, after all, the Americans are footing the Greek bill.

ABOVE: Black velvet is combined with flame and white striped faille. The velvet skirt is styled with a mermaid dip. The striped strapless top is moulded to the body and has a cuff finish. A short double-breasted jacket and striped cravat complete the ensemble.

RIGHT: Hyacinth crepe one-piece has a graceful all-round pleated skirt. The fitted bodice is intricately draped to uncover one shoulder. The matching jacket has a nipped waist, double breasted collar, and dipping bustle back formed by three rows of pleating.

TOP RIGHT: Bare-topped gown is made in almond green crepe and trimmed with gold sequins at the neckline and belted waist. A matching conical corsage and lies at the back to hug and flatter the figure. Worn with the conical effect is that of a stream-lined one-piece.

The Noon-Till-Dawn Dress
By BETTY KEEP

The three ensembles sketched were designed by a clever young Australian, Norma Copeland. The designer's policy is to design and make individual dresses to suit the wearer's type—her bonnet is she never repeats a model.

Norma told me she likes to design for women who dress to please men, rather than those who slavishly follow current trends.

The specialty of her salon is the noon-till-dawn dress. As the name implies, it is a dress and jacket ensemble planned to suit the tempo of modern living.

Worn with the jacket it is a trim daytime ensemble; without the jacket, a perfect dress for dancing and dining.

Norma styles her models with skirts around 12 inches from the ground. She thinks this length accents ankle elegance.

Noticeable throughout the collection is emphasis on the whittled-down waist and curved hips—both are essentially young. Shoulders are moderate, either quite round and smooth, or square and smooth, whichever line is chosen it's definitely a "natural-shoulder look."

Fabrics and colours are especially interesting. Failles, heavy crepes, pure silks, and super velvets are all used. Colours include flame, pink, mauve, and hyacinth group, green, from a light sea-foam to pine-green (nearly black), plus dramatic printed and plain combinations.

FASHION'S ODD SPOTS LEMON SAUCE MERINGUE

Fashions are becoming more weird and more wonderful every day. Here are some of the latest:

Invisible shoes of glass nylon with gold heels. Fogasus beach shoes with winged heels.

Rounded backs with sloped shoulders and pigeon chests—achieved by good cut, not bad deportment.

Cloche hats with hair sticking through the top.

Handkerchiefs floating from pockets, belts, cuffs, and everywhere possible in Dior's clothes.

Short hair, worn with ducks' tail neckline.

Five rows of choker pearls.

Long necks needed.

New "poor clothes" of sack-darned or patched and tinned for beachwear.

Curates' hats from Robert Piguet; birettas from Schin-parelli.

Horsehair twisted into hats exactly like red wigs.

2 eggs, 1 cup sugar, juice and grated rind 1 lemon, 2 table-spoons arrowroot, dessertspoon shortening, 1 pint water.

Blend the arrowroot with the lemon juice. Into the saucepan pour the water, half the sugar and grated lemon rind. Bring to the boil and pour carefully on to the blended arrowroot, stirring all the while. Return to the fire and stir until mixture boils and thickens. Remove from the fire, fold in the shortening and stir until melted. Separate the eggs, add the egg yolks to the lemon mixture. Return to the fire and cook for three minutes, without boiling. Beat into creamed egg whites and gradually add the remainder of the sugar. Pile roughly on top of the pudding and bake in a slow oven, temp. 325 deg. F., gas, 400 deg. F., about 15 to 20 minutes, or until lightly browned.

How to wean baby
Happily

The first weaning food you give to baby is of special importance, for on it depends the progress to be made in the months ahead. The food must be very nourishing, easily digested and absorbable and palatable so that baby readily accepts it. Farax, beyond question, fulfils these requirements.

Farax is made from the three invaluable cereals—wheat, oats and rice—each contributing to balanced nourishment. These are carefully blended with other vital elements which include iron, calcium and phosphorus to build blood and bone, and measured vitamin D to make bones strong and help teeth to come through.

With the help of Farax, weaning is a happy time for both mother and baby. Farax needs only the addition of milk and sugar. No cooking is required. Start with a spoon... quickly, easily, weaning has begun.

YOUR MORNING BIB AND TUCKER

By JANET MARTIN

Beauty Beware

By CLAUDIA

Summer appears to have arrived unexpectedly early this year. Certainly the sun is amazingly hot at times, so we are back at the old, old problem of Coping with the Sun!

Making an early start is quite a sound idea, for at least we have a chance of breaking in gently. But each of us has a decision to make first, about our attitude towards King Sol. Are we to be worshippers or scornors? Are we going to bow, turn our backs, or just give a polite nod?

Let's examine the possibilities and impossibilities. There is just one type of skin which should have nothing to do with the sun at all. That is the very fair, fine, pinky skin of the true English Rose complexion.

This type of skin will never tan in 1,000,000 years and it's folly even to try. The result will be red, sore and most unbecoming. If this is your skin, cherish it, keep out of the sun or put a layer of protective cream and a sunshade between you and the strong rays.

"Waterproof Creams"

If you don't like to be a white among the brownskins, there are a number of excellent sun-tan creams and lotions, easy to smooth on with moistened hands and waterproof. They give protection and a light, golden tan at one and the same time.

At the other end of the scale are the sun's favourite daughters, whose skins are cared for to a beautiful sun gold or sun tan in a matter of hours, or days, lovely and lasting without any trouble at all.

If you are one of the sun worshippers, there are two things for you to remember. The first is not to overdo the tanning. The vague for deep, dark, heavily tanned skins went out when the "natural beauty" cult came in.

Secondly, your skin needs as much care as the more delicate one if you are to avoid that weatherbeaten, cracked, sun-dried up, natural skin in the skin, causing roughness and wrinkles.

So you must counteract this by using plenty of oils and emollient sun cream while you are out in the sun, and plenty of rich, nourishing skinfood at night. The longer you are out in the sun, the more oils your skin needs and you will be surprised how quickly they will be absorbed into the skin.

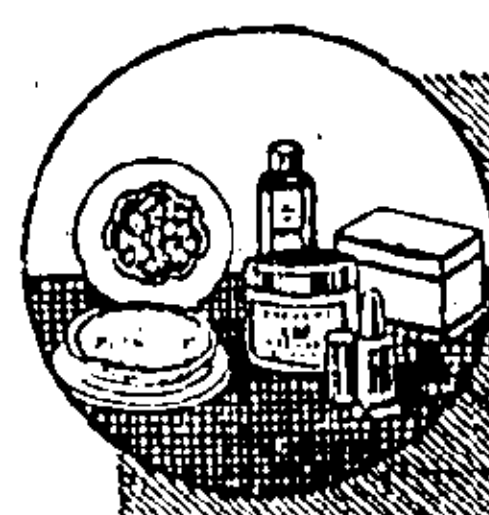

"Tan Without Tears"

For all the "in between" types of skin a pleasing light tan can be achieved with varying degrees of difficulty. Sunny days in this early part of the summer are ideal for getting the skin gradually accustomed to sunshine. A little sun every day is the recipe for tanning without tears.

Start with a brief five minutes and increase a few more minutes each day until, by the time the really hot days arrive, you can go for a swim without getting your arms and back scorched. When you have had your quota of sun, slip on one of the smart little beach jackets, thigh length and long sleeved.

The type of skin which goes "Red Indian" is one of the most difficult to acclimatise. Quite often you get a good tan, but it is too red. Try going more slowly and using a protective lotion or sun cream every time you are out in the sun, with a light sun-tinted cream to tone down the redness.

This is the time to start if you want a happy summer in the sun. To scorch and blister is such a waste of time and beauty, for who can look pretty with a peeling nose and sore, red skin? Besides, after peeling, you only have to start all over again!

At Your Fingertips
by VICTOR MAMAK

"Dear Mr. Mamak,
I am having an evening dress made which is rather deep. But I am afraid my neck is not in a very pretty state. It has become wrinkled and crepe-like, although I am only 32, and my face is wrinkle free. What should I do? Please help."—SOS.

It seems that, like most women, you have allowed your neck to go its own way. It is a great pity that a majority of women stop their beauty care at the chin, and the result is that their beauty stops there too. If they were to give their necks the same care as their faces, the picture would be different.

I must tell you that it is hard work rejuvenating "aged" neck. Proper care, patience and perseverance, however, will reward your efforts.

Treat your neck the same way as your face. Regular cleansing with a vitaminised cleansing cream, followed by a massage with a reliable hormone cream will show gradual, but definite improvement. Massage must be done with the proper massage movements. No rough stuff, please, and also take care that, while massaging, you do not stretch the skin. Work across the wrinkles with firm, gentle movements of the fingers.

Correct neck exercises would also be to your advantage, as they would help tone the sagging muscles. Also remember to relax your neck after such exercises.

I must also warn you that neck responds more slowly to treatment than almost any other feature, so do not be discouraged if you fail to see any marked improvement for time after you have started giving it the treatment which it deserved all along.

S.L. The answer to your problem will appear in the next issue of the "Sunday Herald". All letters must take their turn. Victor Mamak.

NEW WAYS TO BRIGHTEN THEIR LIVES

Britain's voluntary workers are continually finding new ways of brightening the lives of old-age pensioners. Latest act of thoughtfulness of the Women's Voluntary Services is to take "trolley shops" to bedridden and, old people in hospital. Each trolley has 50 types of articles including fruit, cake, sweets, cigarettes, tobacco, needles, cottons, elastic and birthday cards. Some are like miniature wool shops. Special orders are also taken and the old people look forward to the visits of these mobile shops with great enjoyment.

Prints, stripes, checks and spots for summer tub frocks are not all destined to be styled on the slim, simpler lines that have returned to popularity.

Every woman to her own style—or to her own several styles—but if gay, pretty things with a frill and a flounce or two are for you, here are some of the summer's newest modified versions of the fuller skirt styles.

Cottons are always best for coolness and with a generous width to the skirt, they are cooler than ever. There is nothing here of your tailored linens, your neat button-through or your slim skirt with its patch pockets and button trimming.

Just to show the versatility of our summer fashions, here are the pretty, youthful styles for summer days.

Seersucker Favourite

Seersucker is a great favourite for cotton frocks this year. You can find it in plain colours, in prints, in checks and stripes. As you know, it must never be ironed, but your man may not know, so be sure to tell him!

A charming style for this material is in pale green, the bodice cut on crossover lines to the waist, where it sports a large, soft bow. The skirt has eight gently flaring panels and a ruffled trim around the hem.

Its twin sister is in red and white striped seersucker with a low cut square neck and a small tub effect like the top of a house-maid's tea apron, outlined with a little organdie frill. The skirt has four bias cut panels, with V-matched striping down the side seams. Generously wide, the skirt is softly gathered at the sides of the waist and at the centre back.

The apron effect is another favourite, particularly good in a plain material. This is most becoming with a wide, almost-off-shoulder neckline with a deep frill hanging from the bound edge. The skirt may be flared or gathered from the waist and then stitched with a gathered frill outlining the shape of an apron. The simpler way is to stitch the frill from points about six inches apart at the waistline, widening out to apron shape and rounding to an almost straight line parallel with the hem but six or eight inches higher.

Laced Bodice

If you like the milkmaid style, here is a quaint, little model which is worn over a blouse of spotted muslin. The blouse has short, puffed sleeves with 1/2" square neckline gathered into a binding across the front. Suppose you have chosen white muslin with blue dots; then your frock will be plain blue to match. It has a very low wedge shaped neck, several inches lower than the blouse; no sleeves; and is laced down the bodice front from neckline to waist.

The lacing can be of cord or ribbon in navy or black and ties into a bow at the waist. A simple flared or gathered skirt leaves detail concentrated in the bodice.

Variety on a theme by Bruyere of Paris suggests a lovely style for prints. This has a deep shawl collar or bertha, laid round the shoulders to reveal the neck and throat, and pleated to a low V neckline at the front where a ribbon bow conceals the join. The bodice is moulded to just below the waist while the skirt hangs in sets of unpressed pleats. This is but one aspect of the summer styles. There are as many trends and varieties as there are leaves on the calendar of summer days and as wide a choice as any woman could wish for.

Ann Temple Keep Him Guessing

Grandma has been married three times, so I asked her how to get and hold a man. She said: "Never let a man know you care for him. Keep him guessing."

"Did you keep them all guessing?"

"Yes, all. To the end." I think she missed a lot. The better part of love is in giving. I should always want to give—and give—and give.

Is Grandma right? Am I wrong?—TROUBLED. Grandma gave you the right answer. What she was saying was: "For heaven's sake stop talking. You young women fairly smother your men. You bore them and lose them."

Don't fool yourself that Grandma was missing a lot. Notice she said "how much you care." You may "dote and be foolish. Love is another name for Wisdom." Grandma was more unselfish than most. Not for her your wallowing in giving. She respected discipline and reticence.

She kept her men because her giving was intelligent and sympathetic and very, very understanding of men's natures.

There's a lot more than you have seen behind her "Keep them guessing."

You needn't be troubled. You've had a very good tip.

Often at the end of a day when I have had a rush of work, although I am dead tired, I am unable to sleep.

Thoughts go milling round and in my head, I can't stop them. Small problems, about which there is really no need to worry, come into my mind and stir this mad racing round.

When in the end I do go to sleep it is a restless sleep and I wake up tired. I would be very grateful if you could tell me of some remedy.—PAULA.

After a rush of work, you say, I don't want to advise a counsel of perfection, but if you can put the brake on the rush you are applying prevention which in this case is very much easier than cure.

One does not suffer from this sort of tiredness if the day's work is even, gone through without pressure of time and interruption, even if the work is in itself hard and strenuous. This is rather like telling you that the only way to be tidy is to try not being untidy—or tidying as you go. Well, there's a good clue there.

But to forestall sleeplessness is a good plan to cool down mentally for half an hour immediately before bed-time, resting completely, physically relaxed in an armchair and then mentally relaxing—getting back to some scene of placidity and restfulness which you know has the power to soothe you.

To stop the racing thought when it does happen try a few feet exercises and massage of the feet and legs. And while stroking the legs with the palm of the hand breathe deeply and evenly and count slowly as you do so—again, two-to ten, over and over again.

That's my tip. I find it effective, but I hope readers will send other suggestions.

In his quarterly report to Congress, the State Department's Office of Foreign Liquidation Commissioner said the overseas surplus sales programme will end on June 30. Through March 31 the Office sold surplus property worth the United States $549,263,000,000 for a total of $51,771,000,000.
The report said 62 per cent of the total was sold in major bulk sales to foreign governments. The biggest buyer was France which bought property costing the United States $51,400,000,000 for $5,800,000,000. The Philippines came next and then China, which bought $6,824,000,000 worth of United States surplus for $1,170,000,000. China bought 198 United States vessels ranging from small boats to tankers.—United Press.

WASHINGTON, APRIL 30.
The Commerce Department reported the first sizeable post-war decrease in manufacturers' inventories. Book value of their stocks at the end of March was $531,700,000,000 — a $530,000,000 drop for the month.—Associated Press.

NEW YORK STOCK EXCHANGE
New York, April 30.
The stock market moved indecisively in limited trading yesterday. Trading was limited to 810,000 shares. Of 870 issues traded, 270 gained, 453 declined. Pullman advanced an extreme of 2 1/2 to a new top, closing up 1 1/2 at 36 1/2. Pullman management proposed spending nearly $10,000,000 to retire outstanding stock at a maximum price of $155.14. Richfield gained 1 1/2 at 36 1/2 on reports of favourable progress in a new oil field.

Busmen Vs Kit Chee

A capacity crowd is expected at Boundary Street this afternoon, when Kowloon Motor Bus meet Kit Chee in a "First" Division soccer game which is expected to decide the runner-up position.

If Kowloon Motor Bus go down to Kit Chee, the honour of being runners-up in the First Division will go to Chinese Athletic, who obtained two valuable points yesterday when Eastern, who they were to have met at Caroline Hill, failed to field a team.

In the event of the busmen being forced to share the points with Kit Chee, a play-off between KMB and Chinese Athletic will be necessary.

Today's game holds promise of being a keenly contested affair, with the busmen starting off at a slight disadvantage after yesterday's downpour. KMB depend a great deal upon the mobility of their forwards, whose speed may be retarded by the heavy state of the ground.

The following is today's programme:

FIRST DIVISION
KMB v Kit Chee: Boundary Street, 4 p.m.
Referee: Capt. Chinnell; Linesmen: W. Gibson and R. Richardson.
South China v Plover: Caroline Hill, 4 p.m.; Referee: R.M. Omer; Linesmen: F.A. Barretto and S.Y. Kwok.
RAP v South China: "A", 4 p.m.; Referee: Capt. Stone; Linesmen: Pte. Collins and Sgt. Mansam, Army (bye).

SECOND DIVISION
Taiwan v Club (cancelled).
Tranways v Plover: Sankow, 4.30 p.m.; Referee: Pte. Collins.
KMB v Eastern: WD Chinnell's Bolicourt and University v Dockyard, cancelled.

EASTERN FAIL TO TURN UP

(By "ROVER")

No games were played in either Division of the Hong Kong Football League yesterday.

Chinese Athletic, who are still in the running for the runners-up position in the Senior Division, gained two valuable points as a result of Eastern failing to field a team.

The Athletic were on the field at Caroline Hill at the time advertised for the kick-off, but no Eastern player turned out.

Mr. R. M. Omer, the referee appointed for the game, lined up the Athletic and after he had blown his whistle to signify the commencement of the match, the Athletic forwards took the ball into the field and placed it into an empty net.

After this had been done, Mr. Omer again blew his whistle, this time to denote the end of the game.

Kit Chee, who were also due to meet Army HK at Caroline Hill in a Second Division game, were unable to field a team and indicated their agreement to the two points being awarded to Army HK.

Have, April 29.

John Langridge made an encouraging start to the English cricket season by compiling the first Sussex century during a friendly two-day match against Hampshire, which began here today.

He scored 122 in two and a quarter hours with two sixes and 15 fours as his chief strokes. The closing scores were: Sussex 267; Hampshire 38 for 4.—Reuter.

Fiery Duracher Is Suspended

New York, April 29.

Fiery Leo Duracher, who believes a quick tongue is almost as important in baseball as a bat and ball, was suspended indefinitely by Baseball Commissioner A. B. Chandler today in a move that could presage the end of his flamboyant diamond career.

The suspension, the second meted out to "The Lip" by Chandler, was ordered on the heels of an "altercation" on Thursday at the Polo Grounds, where Duracher was accused of striking and kicking a spectator after New York Giants dropped a 15-2 game to Brooklyn Dodgers.

Chandler, through Walter Mulberry, baseball's secretary treasurer, ordered Duracher to appear in Cincinnati on Tuesday to discuss the charges. Duracher's suspension was effective immediately and he did not manage Giants in tonight's game at Boston against Braves.

Fifty-one year old Frankie Frisch, Giant captain and previous manager, said he was "in a bit of a fix" and he did not manage Giants in tonight's game at Boston against Braves.

Duracher, the "bad boy" of the National League, was suspended while Chandler investigated reports that he struck and kicked Fred Boyen, 22-year-old Brooklyn youth and ardent Dodger fan. Duracher emphatically denied the charge.

In Boston, the stunned Duracher said he had not been officially notified by Chandler of the suspension and he was "in a bit of a fix" and he did not manage Giants in tonight's game at Boston against Braves.

Boysen was released from hospital today after remaining overnight for examination. Dr. Weisenberg said that doctors found no bruises on his body and X-rays disclosed no internal injuries.—United Press.

Police Reserve Club Meeting

At the Annual General Meeting of the Police Reserve Club, held on Saturday, April 30, the following officers were elected for the year 1949-50:

Members of the General Committee: Chairman, Mok Hing-wing; Vice-Chairman, Lai Iu-kwong; Hon. Secretary, Mak Wai-long; Joint Hon. Treasurers, Yau Kiu-ling, Lau Yung-ning, Tam Kim-fung, Li Kam-chuen and Andrew Siu.

Sub-Committees—Finance, Lee Kim-bun; Club House, Ts'o Chi-ling; Billiard Convenor, Kwok Chum-lun; Games Convenor, Lau Yung-ning; Sports Convenor, Tam Kim-fung.

MEDITERRANEAN FRIENDSHIP CUP

The football tournament for the Mediterranean Friendship Cup will start at Athens on May 12. The draw is May 12, Turkey versus Egypt; May 15, Greece versus Turkey; May 18, Italy versus Turkey; May 21, Italy versus Turkey; May 22, Greece versus Egypt; May 25, Greece versus Italy.

The team with the most victories will be champion.—Associated Press.

TO DEFEND HIS TITLE

New York, April 28.

France's Marcel Cerdan is expected to defend his world middleweight title against Jake Lamotta on June 21 at the New York polo grounds with the winner meeting Rocky Graziano in September in New Jersey.

This picture emerged from conferences of Tournament of Champions following Tony Zale's retirement.—Associated Press.

Britain Wins Both Singles

London, April 30.

The opening day's play in the First Round of the European Zone Davis Cup Competition on Friday ended with Britain winning both singles against Portugal and Czechoslovakia gaining a 2-0 lead over Monaco.

The English Lawn Tennis Association announced that three ties had been settled by mail. Argentina have withdrawn from their first round match with Egypt; Turkey has scratched and Italy passing into the second round; Greece has scratched from their second round match with Switzerland.

At Lisbon, Britain's 28-year-old ace, Tony Mottram, defeated Jose Roquette 6-0, 6-3, 7-5. Geoffrey Palshy beat J. Silva 6-4, 6-1, 6-3.

The results of Czechoslovakia's match against Monaco played at Prague were: J. Drobny (Czechoslovakia) beat G. Hacquard 6-0, 6-1, 6-0; V. Cernik (Czechoslovakia) beat A. Noghes 6-3, 6-2, 6-2.

In the second round the winners meet the victors of the Portugal v Britain match.—Reuter.

What A Pity!

Edinburgh, April 30.

Over 100,000 gallons of whisky, most of it intended for export, were destroyed by fire in a bonded warehouse at South Queensferry on the Fifth of North last night. The store is occupied by the Distillers Agency Limited.

Firemen succeeded in getting the fire under control shortly after midnight.—Reuter.

Flying Saucer Stories Derided

The "flying saucer" stories circulating around the world are a product of nonsense, according to a man who should know.

Mr. S. D. Irwin of the Curtiss-Wright Aircraft Company of the United States, who passed through Hong Kong yesterday on his way from Australia to Manila, described the famed saucers as the product of mass hallucinations.

Mr. Irwin has never seen any and hopes he never will. The aircraft executive is touring the Far East surveying business conditions and contacting customers. He expects to return to Hong Kong in about a fortnight's time. Later he will go to India.

Woman's Gold Confiscated

One tael of gold, found on a woman Tse Sou-fuk, on Friday at the Custodian Wharf, was ordered to be confiscated by Mr. Hin-shing Lo at Central yesterday.

Defendant was absent, and had her bail of $100 forfeited. A large quantity of unmanifested cargo export on the ss. Chung Kai, on April 22, was ordered to be confiscated on the application of Revenue Inspector W. G. Humphreys at Central yesterday.

The goods were 1,000 plastic spoons, 1,110 plastic combs, 1,091 plastic bowls, 535 plastic soap cases, 277 dozens of plastic belts, 2,100 cigarettes, 2,375 fountain pens, and a small quantity of canned goods.

For begging in an insolent manner, and for breaking an expulsion order, a 64-year-old dwarf Chung Hing-fat, was sentenced to six weeks imprisonment and banishment by Mr. Hin-shing Lo at Central yesterday.

According to the prosecution, defendant was arrested on Thursday at King's Road.

Defendant told the Court that he had two houses in the Colony, but his wife kicked him out.

Crowds Pour Into London For Cup Final

London, April 30.

Cup Final crowds from the Midlands poured into London from the early hours today, be-ribboned and wearing their teams' colours in rosettes of all sizes.

Altogether 73 trains were arranged by the railway authorities to bring the fans to London and the streets were quickly spashed with the Royal blue and white of Leicester and the gold and black of Wolverhampton.

In addition, motor coaches streamed down the roads from the Midlands and the North. Midlanders obviously dominated the crowds for the Cup is sure to find a home there this year—only 40 miles separate Wolverhampton and Leicester.

Wolverhampton are the favourites to win the Trophy, but their older supporters temper their enthusiasm with caution.

They recall the 1938 Final, when their team, the most publicised footballers of the age, were beaten by Portsmouth by four goals to one—one of the biggest upsets in Cup history.

Leicester fans were undismayed by the odds weighing heavily against their team. They have knocked out Portsmouth in the semi-finals and they say that what they did to the League champions they can do to the Wolves.

Princess Elizabeth, it was learned today, will be going to the match with the Duke of Edinburgh. They returned to London last night after their Welsh tour.

This year for the first time since the war, the King will not be at the Final.—Reuter.

Champs To Meet The Rest On Club Ground

As the Caroline Hill ground being unavailable on Sunday, May 8, the Exhibition Soccer Match between Champions and The Rest, will now be played at Club Ground, Happy Valley, at the same date and time.

Referee and Linesmen for this match will be: Referee: K.K. Ip; Linesmen: F.A. Barretto and Sgt. Mansam.

The Second Division soccer match between Solihulls' and South China on Wednesday, May 4, will now be played on Thursday, May 5, at the same ground and time.

The Second Division soccer match, Army-HK v Solihulls' on Saturday, May 7, has been cancelled.

The following postponed First Division matches will be played on Tuesday, May 10, 1949: Club vs. South China "B" (P from 19.30); Club ground, 8 p.m.; Referee: J. Ward; Linesmen: F.A. Barretto and Y. Mak.

Police v Army (PP from 17.15.49); Boundary, 8 p.m.; Referee: W. Gaffney; Linesmen: W. Gibson and H. Richardson.

What Does Joe Louis' Retirement Mean?

(By "The Sydney Sunday Herald" Staff Correspondent in New York)

The retirement of Joe Louis means to boxing what the retirement of Don Bradman means to cricket.

To a whole generation of boxing fans in literally every corner of the globe the ring will not seem the same for many years.

Louis' achievements as a fighter were legendary. Equally important, however, was Louis' reputation as a clean sportsman—a champion whose modesty won him wide admiration.

When he won the title on June 22, 1937, from Jim Braddock, Louis became the second Negro in history to gain the heavy weight championship.

Memory of Jack Johnson's lustrous exploits had not been entirely forgotten.

What is more, Louis was surrounded by a team of always victorious sharp practices.

However, no scandal ever attached to Louis' name in the 11½ years of his reign.

When New York State a few weeks ago refused to grant a licence to a boxer who had been convicted of a crime, Louis was the only one who was not affected.

Louis' retirement was a blow to the sport of boxing, but it was also a blow to the public's faith in the sport.

"Nice people, the English," he said quietly. "They put up a statue to the guy who knocked them out."

When he entered the Army he was given a "hold-mor" refrigerator. "There's a lot of things in it," he said. "There's a lot of things in it."

The Army assigned him to "hold-mor" work, giving exhibitions in various theatres of war. "There was some talk that I could have had a commission," Louis later recalled.

"I didn't want it. I didn't want anything special. I just wanted to be a GI."

The last picture of Joe Louis was given by the champion himself in a series of autobiographic articles.

He told the fabulous story of his rise from a "share cropper's" shack off a dirt road in Alabama. He was born on May 13, 1914, "land of clumsy footed."

As a baby, he says, he had the strength to overturn a butter church.

When Joe was a boy his mother moved the whole Barrows family from poverty-stricken Alabama to Detroit.

The champion's real name is Joseph Louis Barrows.

Mother's Dream
Joe didn't do well in school, nor did he satisfy his mother's dream. She wanted him to become a musician (a violin felt puny in his hands).

Joe lugged 60lb blocks of ice to upstairs flats to help his family in the depression days. At night, he did some amateur boxing.

Louis had his first professional fight on July 4, 1934. It ended in a first-round knockout victory for Louis.

This opponent, now virtually forgotten, was Jack Kracken; Louis' purse was $2 dollars.

Three years later Louis, trained by his beloved mentor, Chippie Blackburn, and backed by Madison Square Garden's promotional organization, was heavyweight champion of the world.

Since then he has defended his title 25 times, winning 22 knockouts and three points decisions.

His lifetime professional record consists of 61 fights, one defeat, and 52 knock-out wins.

Max Schmeling, former German world champion, knocked Louis out in the 12th round of their bout in 1936.

Schmeling had discovered Louis' vulnerability to a right to the jaw.

Nazi Propaganda

After Louis won the title, Schmeling came to New York for a return match. He was preceded by tumultuous Nazi racial propaganda.

Partly because of the defeat and partly because Louis felt offended as a Negro, he developed a furious hatred for Schmeling.

Before the fight, President Roosevelt encouraged Joe.

"The President heard of my being in Washington," Louis wrote. "He sent his car for me."

The President had me lean over so that he could feel my muscles. He said: "Joe, we need muscles like yours to beat Germany."

"That's the only thing he said, but I figured he knew then we would be fighting the Germans some day."

At any rate, Louis knocked Schmeling out in the first round on June 22, 1938.

"I caught him coming off the ropes, and ripped one into his belly. I thought in my mind, 'Here's that Mister Superman,'" replied Louis.

Perfect Record
Tommy Farr went 15 rounds with Louis in 1937. So did Arturo Godoy in 1940; so did Joe Walcott in the memorable split decision in 1947, which Louis barely won.

Last summer Louis knocked out Walcott in the 11th, thus preserving his "perfect" championship record.

Now nearing 35, at a time when the heavyweight division is conspicuously mediocre, Louis preferred retirement to defeat at the hands of a young second-rater.

He has made close to four million dollars (more than $4,000,000), most of which has gone in taxes and a high style of living.

He says he has enough to go on comfortably, and his promoting business should bring him a handsome income.

Whether Louis is a better fighter than Dempsey or other old-time greats will never be settled.

It will never be disputed, however, that he met all comers for 12 years, beat them all, and never fouled one.

LRC'S SWIMMING POOL CHRISTENED IN RAIN

There was felicitation at the Ladies' Recreation Club yesterday, when its brand new $150,000 swimming pool had its "christening".

Despite adverse weather, the event was carried through with meticulous feminine efficiency by the committee comprising Mrs. D. L. Prophet, the President; Mrs. G. B. Smart, Hon. Secretary; Mrs. C. L. C. Blott, Hon. Treasurer; Mrs. G. E. F. Hibbet, Mrs. W. J. Skinner, Mrs. J. Lannaman and Mrs. J. W. D. Cooper, committee members.

In the wake of rumbling thunder and sheet lightning alternating with a battery of press photographers' flash lamps, rain, wind and cold, Mrs. Prophet declared the pool open just as five members hit the water to bring about the first splashes from dives at varying heights.

The club premises were packed to capacity with some 200 members and their guests under umbrellas and rain coats and using every available means of shelter.

The Colony swim champions were there also to demonstrate their respective styles. These included the Anderson sisters, Shauna and Heather, Leon Roza-Perera on the diving board, his brother Gerry, the "butterfly" champion and Wilfred Lawrence.

After the exhibitions, members of the LRC joined in a quick cold dip while tea was being served.

In her opening speech, Mrs. Prophet said in part—

"I returned to the Colony two and a half years ago. Being a pre-war resident of Hong Kong, I remembered that it was like before the Occupation, it was not unnatural that I felt moved to take an interest in a job that would provide the community with some of their pre-war recreational facilities."

In A Sad Condition

"The Ladies' Recreation Club was in a sad condition and I was then the only two members of the pre-war Committee back in the Colony, we got together and planned a meeting of members to obtain approval for the revival and rehabilitation of the Club."

"It was found that the estimated cost of rehabilitation was so great that it would have been quite impossible a task for members to undertake the necessary repairs without the financial aid of the Hong Kong and Shanghai Banking Corporation, and we are indeed grateful that they have sufficient faith in the Club to finance the operation."

"Our progress during the early months of reconstruction was largely due to Mr. Michael Wright who undertook the plans for the rehabilitation, and to Mr. J.E. Richardson who tramped many a weary step through thick undergrowth, endeavouring to find the best way in which we could site the Tennis Courts on land whose contours had been considerably altered by the Japanese."

"Although travelling was difficult at that time, Mrs. Richardson and Mrs. White undertook the duties of Treasurer and Secretary respectively, working from Repulse Bay—a none too easy task being so far from the source of income."

"Mrs. Digby joined our ranks as President, and with some of the ambitious schemes propounded by some members of the Committee, proved a tower of strength and a steady tempering influence to us all."

Financial Advisors

"Being unused to dealing with thousands of dollars, Financial Advisors were appointed to give the Committee counsel and advice, and their kind assistance went a long way in alleviating the fear and trepidation with which the Committee regarded the mounting costs."

"I cannot estimate the enormous number of hours which Mrs. Black, Mrs. Mackie and Mrs. Skinner spent in training the groundsmen to keep the courts in condition once they were laid. Mrs. Skinner was an excellent teacher, while Mrs. Mackie spent many weary and perspiring days still cherishing the picture of her in a coolie hat, with hose pipe in hand smoking cigarette after cigarette as she determinedly won the battle of the grounds, and particularly of the groundsmen."

"And the face at the window—Mrs. Black who took over when Mrs. Mackie left off and phoned from Branksome Towers to the boy know she was looking and keeping check whenever the groundsmen ceased their labours!"

Our Highest Hopes

"Since those days we have moved quickly and progressed better than even our highest hopes allowed. New members have joined in, among them many new residents in this Colony, who do not let us forget that they owed their first social engagements to friends they made at the LRC."

"Many of these new members were faced with a high cost of living and financial difficulties which made them long for a Club with more than one sporting facility. It is unfortunate that in Hong Kong we seem to have a different Club for every sport and social activity. This makes the sum total of Club Entrance Fees and subscriptions an extremely high item on the family budget. We therefore put our minds to the task of considering other facilities we could offer to members for a reasonable monthly fee."

"The colour of our land you will appreciate, makes it difficult to deal with the provision of additional forms of recreation, but it did seem that for the financial outlay involved, the best we could do from everyone's point of view in the limited area available, would be to incorporate a Swimming Pool."

"There are some members who preferred the exclusiveness of the pre-war LRC. To these members I must therefore stress the following points:

"That it was a financial impossibility.

"That the Memorandum of this Club clearly states—The objects for which the Club is established are:

3c. To provide tennis courts, or near the Club and to lay out and prepare such grounds for the Club and to provide Pavilions, Swimming Baths, Lavatories, Refreshment Rooms other conveniences in connection therewith.

3d. To promote the game of tennis or other athletic sports or pastimes.

"Ladies and Gentlemen, we have provided you with tennis courts, we have rehabilitated your pavilion, you are about to christen your swimming bath."

500 Members

"We have reached the limit of 500 members which we consider sufficient for the present facilities available, we have another 70 people on a mounting waiting list to be considered."

"Owing to a large extent to the fact that all office work in this Club is done by the voluntary help of our members, we are, my husband advises me, operating on a sound financial basis, and if the Club can continue this way, our overdraft, which was never more than $150,000, should never be more than two-thirds of the sum, and from its peak should rapidly decrease."

"In the two and a half years since the rehabilitation of the Club started, the Committee have had many trying moments, but the wholehearted support of members has given them the determination to make our Club one of the best in the Colony, with an ever-increasing number of facilities. Today we see the completion of our first big new project, the one which several of us have for many months referred to as 'The Pool'."

"No greater pleasure could have come to me than to have the opportunity of presenting you with the finished article, no greater honour than being asked to finish off the job by opening it."

"My Committee have drawn up as few rules as possible regarding the use of the pool particularly as regards junior members. It is your Pool to use as freely and as often as you please. Our Club membership is comprised of roughly half married and half single members. We hope that our married members will see to it that it is unnecessary for the Committee to restrict their youngsters from as full a use as possible of the large pool."

Club Facilities

"One word with regard to changing-room accommodation, catering and seating facilities. We have done the best we can for the moment, and hope that our accommodation will be sufficient. But we are novices regarding what is necessary, and we have tried to keep outlay as low as possible until we have had experience. Feeling as we do that a completely new Club House is our ultimate goal, and we hope more satisfactory and more economical in the long run, we propose to make as few adjustments as possible in our present one."

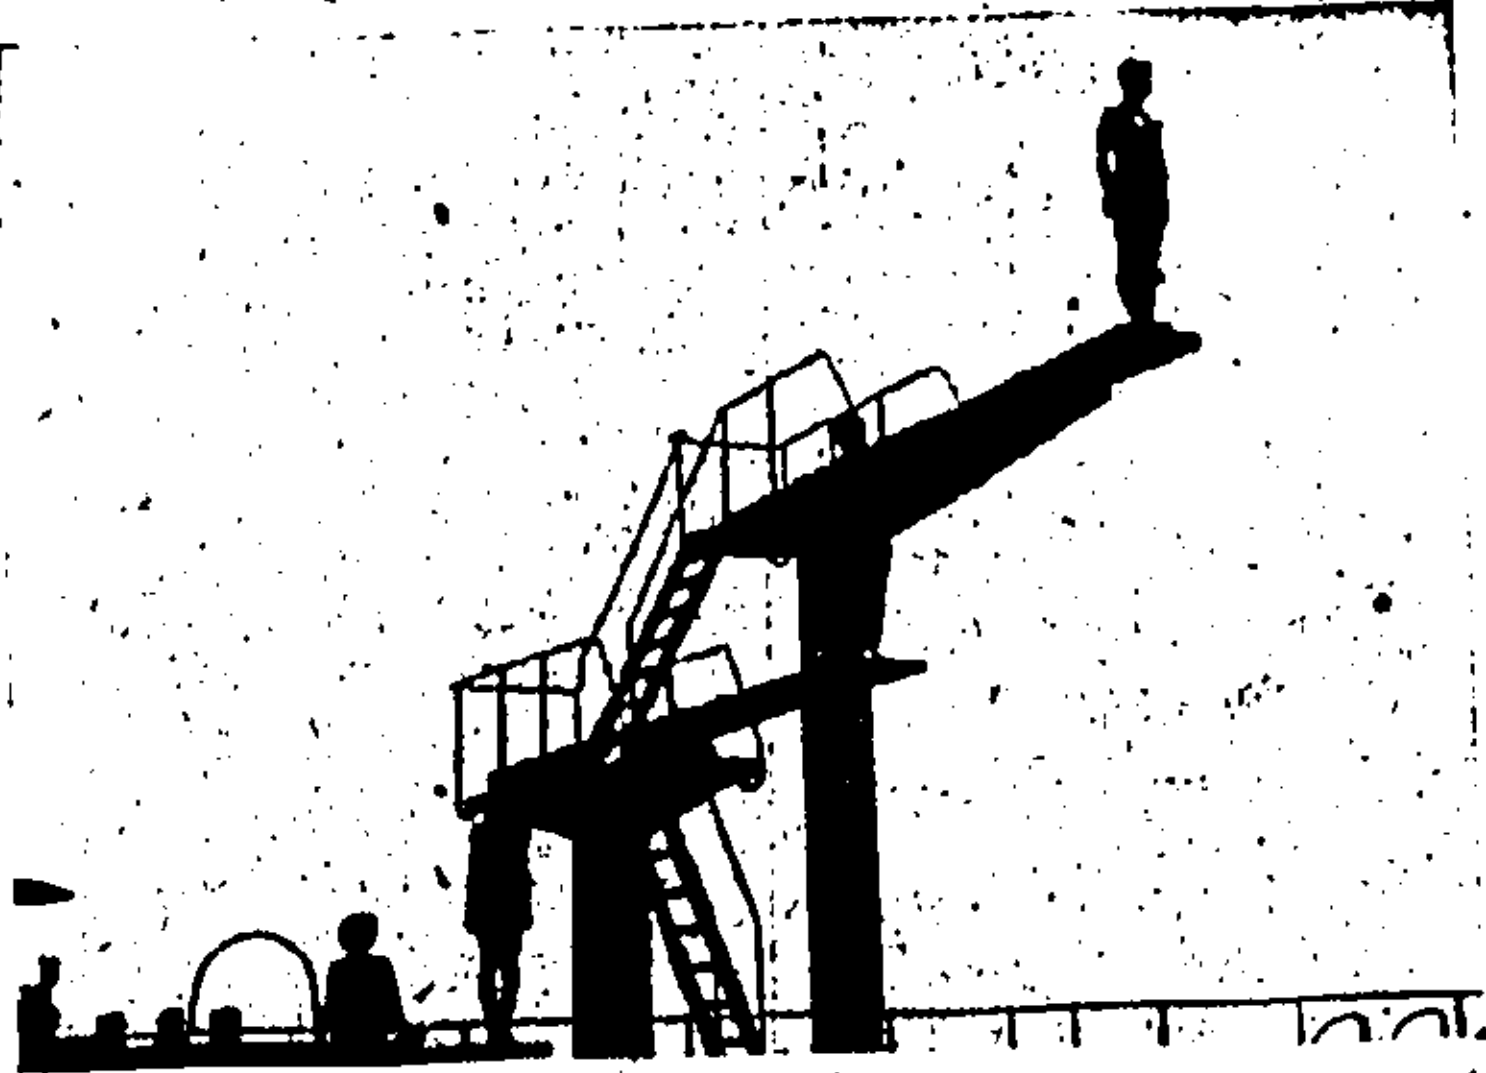

"A large kitchen and more showers and lavatories are on the list for next month, and we hope shortly to be able to provide you with snack, tiffin and supper. We must learn to walk before we can run, and will try to cope with the provision of necessary additions as the demand arises."

"Meanwhile, I hope that you will assist the Committee by making helpful suggestions as to

HKSA Concludes Season With Ball

(By "GRANDSTAND")

The Hong Kong Softball Association formally concluded the 1948/49 season with a highly successful Presentation Ball held at the Peninsula Hotel last night.

The traditional 'social' was attended by well over 400 members of the softball fraternity, which included past and present adherents to the popular pastime.

The following guests of honour were at the Official Table: Mr. & Mrs. L. Gaddi, Mr. & Mrs. Dimond, Mr. & Mrs. F. Bush, Mr. & Mrs. Ernie Heather, Mr. & Mrs. A. Arculli, Miss J. C. Arculli, and Miss Alice Mar. Dr. & Mrs. F.J. Molten were the hosts for the evening.

The assembly of merry-makers danced to the melodious strains of Fred Carpio and his rhythm makers, and at intervals delightful entertainment was provided by local artists.

Immediately after supper, Proxy Molten made a brief but fiery speech against certain unsporting gestures during the past season that would harm the game, and urged that fans should abandon their prejudices and play for the game's sake—win, lose or draw. Play Softball!

The President of the Association also thanked the various prize donors who had contributed much to the success of the Association's activities. The Souvenir Programme which included past records as well as several literary contributions from leading personalities of the softball world, was well received.

WEATHER'S NASTY TRICK

The Clerk of the Weather played a very nasty trick on Hong Kong's sportsmen yesterday by washing out all soccer, lawn bowls and other forms of outdoor sport.

The heavy downpour throughout the afternoon did not, however, dampen the enthusiasm of members of the Ladies' Recreation Club and their friends, who braved the elements to attend the official opening of the Club's new $150,000 swimming pool.

The Athletic Meet between King George V School and Land Forces Hong Kong, which was to have been held yesterday, will now take place on Wednesday next at the same time and place.

WOLVES WIN FA CUU

London, April 30.
Aggressive Wolves of Wolverhampton Wanderers today won the English Football Association Cup, most prized trophy of English soccer, beating Leicester City of the Second Division, by three goals to one at Wembley's Empire Stadium here.

A capacity crowd of 100,000, including Princess Elizabeth and the Duke of Edinburgh, saw the "Wolves" capture the prize. Wolverhampton led 2-0 at half-time.—Reuter.

YANKEES BEAT RED SOX 7-1

New York, April 30.

The New York Yankees continued to set the pace in the American League yesterday, defeating the Boston Red Sox 7-1 behind the six hit pitching of Vic Raschi.

The Cleveland Indians, on loose with a three run barrage in the ninth inning to whip the Detroit Tigers 4-1 and give Gene Bearden his second victory of the season.

A two run rally in the ninth broke a four game losing streak for the Philadelphia Athletics and gave them a 6-5 victory over the Washington Senators.

Southpaw Lou Brissie was credited with his third victory. The St. Louis Browns and the Chicago White Sox were idle.

At Brooklyn, the Dodgers were deprived of the National League leadership by the Philadelphia Phillies 6-2, with lefty Ken Hentz letting Brooklyn down with eight scattered hits for his third straight win.

The Chicago Cubs edged out St. Louis 6-4 in 12 innings on a time by single by rookie catcher Forrest Burges with two bases loaded. Enos Slaughter homered for the Cardinals in the fourth.

Inter-School Athletic Meet

More than 3,000 school children from 26 schools in Kowloon will take part in an inter-school athletic meet, to be held in the grounds of the Kowloon Tong School today.

It will be the first of a two-day event. The second day will be on May 4.

The meet has been sponsored by the Kowloon branch of the Chinese YMCA whose President, Mr. Lam Tsz-fung, will officially declare the meet open at 9 a.m. today.

One of the party, a man, had dropped out. They are making for John O'Grady's, northernmost point of Scotland.

Georgina, a mongrel dog, has followed them all the way on foot.

The party want to popularise horse riding and draw attention to the high number of horses slaughtered in Britain.—Reuter.
